Die Literatur der englischen Romantik, Teil II (Vorlesung)

Nachdem die Vorlesung im Sommersemester sich mit der philosophisch-historischen und poetologischen Grundlegung des Verständnisses der englischen Romantik beschäftigt hat, werden nun im Wintersemester die systematischen Fragen nach Historismus, Subjektivität/Individualismus, Naturkonzeption und Dichtungstheorie/Dichtungssprache auf das Werk der wichtigsten romantischen AutorInnen bezogen. Dabei wird der Schwerpunkt auf der romantischen Lyrik liegen, jedoch werden sich Vorlesungen dezidiert auch mit der Entwicklung des Romans von Jane Austen bis Walter Scott beschäftigen. Zudem werden die Bedingungen des Dramas/Theaters in der Zeit der Romantik an zentralen Beispielen diskutiert. Historisch wird die englische Romantik über zwei Semester als Schwellenzeit zwischen Neoklassizismus und Aufklärung auf der einen und dem viktorianischen Zeitalter auf der anderen Seite dargestellt - als eine Zeit, in der unwiderruflich die bürgerliche Moderne beginnt. Als Begleitliteratur werden empfohlen die ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Game Analysis: Mass Effect Andromeda (Übung)

This Blockseminar will introduce students to the field of video game studies by conducting a critical analysis of the science fiction role-playing game "Mass Effect: Andromeda". We will approach the game thereby from a variety of perspectives such as genre, space, narrative, ludology, agency, and aesthetics. This approach will not only shine a diverse light on "Mass Effect: Andromeda" itself, but also result in a fruitful discussion of the game. Naturally, a reader with a variety of critical texts will be uploaded in time before the Blockseminar, and an additional session before it will introduce students to the course. In order to obtain LPs, then, you will have to formulate a thesis paragraph on a certain aspect of the game. This will reward you with 2LP. Additional LP can be obtained, once you choose to write an essay (3 or 4LP). It is mandatory for participants to play the game, read the texts, and attend regularly. ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Reading American Fiction: From Fitzgerald to Morrison (Übung)

In this seminar we will read a selection of significant works of American fiction of the 20th century. In a first short section of the seminar, students will be introduced to key terms and concepts of the analysis of narrative texts and critical approaches to the interpretation of prose fiction. We will then engage in close-readings of texts by major writers of American fiction, including F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, John Barth, and Toni Morrison. Based on our close-readings and our exploration of the formal, and thematic features, we will contextualize and place these stories in a cultural-historical context while paying particular attention to the variety of literary styles and techniques that comprises the rich spectrum of American fiction, including modernist and postmodernist tendencies. We will read three novels (one long, two short) in this seminar and selection of short stories. Students must have read Toni Morrison's Beloved (1987) by the beginning of the term. There ... VL Cultural Theory (Vorlesung)

Drawing on examples from current debates, these lectures on cultural theory outline some of the most relevant concepts for literary and cultural studies, including different notions of 'culture' itself.

Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

As an academic exercise cultural studies is based on the conviction that the study of cultural processes, such as the production, circulation and use of cultural artifacts, is important to an in depth understanding of the ways in which "power" manifests itself in the social and political orders of all human communities. Diversity studies enquire into common structures of oppression based on constructions of hegemonic identities, e.g. male, white, heterosexual, etc. It looks at the cultural contributions in society, culture and history of those historically underrepresented and denied access to power due to their racial, class, gender, sexual, etc. identities.

Die Literatur der englischen Romantik, Teil II (Vorlesung)

Nachdem die Vorlesung im Sommersemester sich mit der philosophisch-historischen und poetologischen Grundlegung des Verständnisses der englischen Romantik beschäftigt hat, werden nun im Wintersemester die systematischen Fragen nach Historismus, Subjektivität/Individualismus, Naturkonzeption und Dichtungstheorie/Dichtungssprache auf das Werk der wichtigsten romantischen AutorInnen bezogen. Dabei wird der Schwerpunkt auf der romantischen Lyrik liegen, jedoch werden sich Vorlesungen dezidiert auch mit der Entwicklung des Romans von Jane Austen bis Walter Scott beschäftigen. Zudem werden die Bedingungen des Dramas/Theaters in der Zeit der Romantik an zentralen Beispielen diskutiert. Historisch wird die englische Romantik über zwei Semester als Schwellenzeit zwischen Neoklassizismus und Aufklärung auf der einen und dem viktorianischen Zeitalter auf der anderen Seite dargestellt - als eine Zeit, in der unwiderruflich die bürgerliche Moderne beginnt. Als Begleitliteratur werden empfohlen die ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Game Analysis: Mass Effect Andromeda (Übung)

This Blockseminar will introduce students to the field of video game studies by conducting a critical analysis of the science fiction role-playing game "Mass Effect: Andromeda". We will approach the game thereby from a variety of perspectives such as genre, space, narrative, ludology, agency, and aesthetics. This approach will not only shine a diverse light on "Mass Effect: Andromeda" itself, but also result in a fruitful discussion of the game. Naturally, a reader with a variety of critical texts will be uploaded in time before the Blockseminar, and an additional session before it will introduce students to the course. In order to obtain LPs, then, you will have to formulate a thesis paragraph on a certain aspect of the game. This will reward you with 2LP. Additional LP can be obtained, once you choose to write an essay (3 or 4LP). It is mandatory for participants to play the game, read the texts, and attend regularly. ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Genres in Poetry (Übung)

The aim of this course is to introduce students to the major genres in poetry (such as the sonnet, the ode, the ballad, the elegy, etc.). The various genres will be scrutinized via a wide range of poems comprising the major epochs of English literature. In order to fully understand these texts, we shall also have a brief look at their respective historical and literary contexts.

Reading American Fiction: From Fitzgerald to Morrison (Übung)

In this seminar we will read a selection of significant works of American fiction of the 20th century. In a first short section of the seminar, students will be introduced to key terms and concepts of the analysis of narrative texts and critical approaches to the interpretation of prose fiction. We will then engage in close-readings of texts by major writers of American fiction, including F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, John Barth, and Toni Morrison. Based on our close-readings and our exploration of the formal, and thematic features, we will contextualize and place these stories in a cultural-historical context while paying particular attention to the variety of literary styles and techniques that comprises the rich spectrum of American fiction, including modernist and postmodernist tendencies. We will read three novels (one long, two short) in this seminar and selection of short stories. Students must have read Toni Morrison's Beloved (1987) by the beginning of the term. There ... VL Cultural Theory (Vorlesung)

Drawing on examples from current debates, these lectures on cultural theory outline some of the most relevant concepts for literary and cultural studies, including different notions of 'culture' itself.

Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

As an academic exercise cultural studies is based on the conviction that the study of cultural processes, such as the production, circulation and use of cultural artifacts, is important to an in depth understanding of the ways in which "power" manifests itself in the social and political orders of all human communities. Diversity studies enquire into common structures of oppression based on constructions of hegemonic identities, e.g. male, white, heterosexual, etc. It looks at the cultural contributions in society, culture and history of those historically underrepresented and denied access to power due to their racial, class, gender, sexual, etc. identities.

American Renaissance (Proseminar)

The American Renaissance (1830-65) is said to be the first formative period of an independent American literature. The critic F.O. Matthiessen mentions the following five authors in his seminal work American Renaissance (1941): Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry David Thoreau, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Herman Melville and Walt Whitman. Over the last decades this narrow view of the literary epoch - as it includes only white male writers - has been criticized widely and now includes literature by women and ethnic minorities as well. Furthermore, the complex and often ambiguous meaning of the texts (both fictional and non-fictional) is taken into account. American Renaissance writers addressed the tensions that arose from the rapid industrialization, the role of both women and African Americans - and the dividing issue of slavery - within the democratic society and a growing distrust of Puritanism as well as the imminent Civil War. In this seminar we will read some of the most prominent works of the A ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Flânerie and the City in 21st-Century Anglophone Novels (Proseminar)

The figure of the flâneur, a character strolling aimlessly through the city and observing its people, originated in the 19th century as a social phenomenon and has since become a heterogeneous and variable literary motif. While the flâneurs of the 19th and 20th centuries had been conceptualised as chroniclers and spectators of the city, who transformed their observations into literature, 21st-century flâneurs have undergone some significant changes with regards to their function within the text. Focussing on the flâneur's encounter with the crowd, today's flânerie texts largely concern themselves with ethical and political questions and use the motif of the flâneur as a model for different concepts of subject formation. Other texts employ the flâneur as a vehicle for a critique of capitalism, following in this Walter Benjamin's theses on the flâneur as commodity, while there's also a broad array of texts that turn to questions of migration and mobility in the 21st century. Historiographic Metafiction (Proseminar)

In a time that seems to be increasingly "post-truth" or "post-factual" and in which fake news and "alternative facts" exert influence on public debates and affairs, postmodern questions about the existence and knowability of truth(s) acquire enforced significance and topicality. Has the postmodern skepticism concerning the epistemological and even ontological possibility of universal truth opened the gateway for an historical and ideological relativism, a kind of factual agnosticism, which makes alternative facts possible? Or are we rather facing a gross misapplication of postmodernism's liberating and anti-ideological recognition of the existence of multiple truths? More than ever our media-saturated information society is confronted with the question: what is true and how can we know it? Probably no other literary form addresses this very question as directly and persistently as the kind of novel which Linda Hutcheon considers the epitome of postmodern writing and for which she has c

Lord Byron (Proseminar)

In this seminar we will approach the life and work of Lord George Gordon Noel Byron (1788-1824). Byron not only elaborated the literary archetype of the so-called "Byronic hero", but his life also epitomized that of the typical Romantic (anti)hero. The eccentric aristocrat's life was full of contradictions and marked by his efforts to flaunt his maverick reputation. Moreover, the rakish poet had numerous love affairs, travelled the world, and eventually died 1824 fighting against the Ottoman Empire in the Greek War of Independence. Based on classicist aesthetics, Byron's works are notorious for their use of satire, irony, and sarcasm. We will, at first, approach Lord Byron by reconstructing his most important biographical data. Afterwards we will discuss Byron's major works, including excerpts from his narrative poems "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage" (1812, 1816, 1818) and "Don Juan" (1819-24). PS Mumbai Narratives (Proseminar)

The metropolis Mumbai, is one of the most densely populated places in the world. It is the 'gateway' to the West, whence colonizers not only entered, but also from where the British finally left in 1947. A multi-ethnic and multi-cultural city, India's commercial and financial center and home to the largest film industry of the world it is marked by its contradictions. Holding a promise of success, prosperity, freedom and fame, it has simultaneously been marked by a history of sectarian violence, poverty and dismal living conditions for many. In this course we will examine various fictional representations of Mumbai.

Shakespeare's Comedies (Proseminar)

More than 400 years after the Bard's death, Shakespeare's comedies are still performed in theatres around the world and continue to entertain present-day audiences with perhaps some of the funniest scenes ever devised for the stage. At the same time, the comedies frequently contain darker elements that are equally fascinating: the laughter comes at the expense of outsiders, who are "most notoriously abused" (thus Olivia on Malvolio in Twelfth Night) by the other characters, and often conflicts are resolved only superficially. In this seminar, students will be made familiar with concepts and conventions of stage comedy and the comical, as well as with cultural and historical backgrounds of Shakespeare's time that help in coming to grips with the world of Shakespeare's fools, fairies and fat knights. Various theoretical approaches to the plays read in class will be taken in order to find out how the humour of Shakespeare's comedies is created through elements of plot and – perhaps less e Zugeordnete Lehrveranstaltungen: Forensic Linguistics (Proseminar) "From the accusation of plagiarism surrounding The Da Vinci Code, to the infamous hoaxer in the Yorkshire Ripper case, the use of linguistic evidence in court and the number of linguists called to act as expert witnesses in court trials has increased rapidly in the past fifteen years." (Coulthard and Johnson 2007) This seminar course is an introduction to the field of forensic linguistics, i.e. the analysis of language that relates to the law either as evidence or as legal discourse, in all of its various manifestations. In the course, we will investigate a broad range of topics, including the role linguists can play in helping the police find suspects and killers based on linguistic evidence (authorship attribution). We shall also take a critical look at "legalese", i.e. legal language itself and discover the role of language in different legal processes, e.g. in police interviews, courtroom interactions and witness accounts, as well as copyright infringement cases. ... (weiter siehe Digicampus) Negativity (Proseminar) In one of her novels, Amanda Cross gives a perfectly good reason for choosing negation as a seminar topic: „The trouble with the universe [is] that negativity [is] insufficiently applauded, rewarded, understood“. We will look at negation from a number of diverse points of view: syntax, semantics and, in particular, pragmatics. In doing so, we will, inter alia, distinguish between negation (a grammatical category) and NEGATING (an act, i.e. a pragmatic concept). To this end, we will investigate negation as a modal category, describe it as a means of mitigation/downtoning (maybe even from an intercultural point of view) and discuss irony and related modes in which a different, implicit type of negating is at stake.

PS Advanced Phonology (Proseminar)

This seminar starts by describing the basic ideas of Generative Phonology and then extends the analysis to a thorough examination of the relationship between phonological rules and representations by looking at various phonological processes in the languages of the world. This will allow us to discover specific phenomena (e.g. rule ordering, absolute neutralization etc.) that will provide us with insight into the general principles of phonological organization. The seminar also covers the representation of phonemes in the form of feature trees and connects phonological with morphological processes via Lexical Phonology.

PS Foreign Accent (Proseminar)

Foreign accent is an unavoidable problem for all adult learners - or is it? In any case there certainly are big individual differences between speakers. A lot of factors are responsible for why someone may be better than someone else, and this class will cover them all: age/neural organization, motivation, experience, input, personality, learning styles, memory etc. The class will also introduce different forms (segmental and prosodic) and models of foreign accent that may predict problems and errors and allow us to improve or perhaps even sound native (sometimes ...). Finally, this seminar will also describe different methods of instruction and discuss the perception of foreign accent in society.

PS History of English (Proseminar)

In this class we will trace back the roots of the English language starting with its genealogical origins as an Indo-European and Germanic language, and then describe its development through the major periods of Old, Middle and Early Modern English up to Modern Day English. All the major linguistic levels such as phonetics/phonology, morphology, syntax and lexicon will be investigated by means of the basic methods and principles of Historical Linguistics, but also by analyzing original texts. We will also take into consideration which external influences (e.g. Viking invasions, Norman conquest) both contributed to and caused the specific changes the English language underwent.

PS Linguistic Approaches to Translation (Proseminar)

In an era of globalization and multiculturalism, translation and interpreting (T&I) are an almost omnipresent feature in our everyday experience of language, but remain frequently misunderstood for a mere technicality. This course will focus on the linguistic aspects of processes of transfer between different languages and introduce the theoretical underpinnings that characterize the approaches of several branches of applied linguistics to this field. Apart from these computational and cognitive models, we will also discuss general principles of translation and examine the linguistic validity of some widely-held beliefs about translation. --- Basic acquaintance with theories and principles of description in the fields of syntax and semantics is strongly recommended if you want to draw full benefit from this course.

PS Phonetics and Phonology (Proseminar)

This seminar offers an introduction to the principles of Phonetics and Phonology, including the articulatory basis and feature descriptions of especially the phonemes and allophones that occur in the major varieties of English. There will be a practical focus on both British (RP) and American (GA) standard pronunciations as well on phonological transcriptions both using IPA (and account of the organizational principles of the IPA will be provided as well) and, for students of the "Lehramt", the systems expected in the Bavarian state exams.

PS Teenage Talk (Proseminar)

The teenage years are known to be the most turbulent phase in human life, with adolescents becoming increasingly independent, separating from their parents and entering and establishing new social networks. The goal of this course is to explore how this is reflected in their language. To this end, we will discuss how teenagers employ language to set themselves apart from older generations and to accommodate to their peers, making them the most important linguistic innovators and the driving force behind language change. We will focus specifically on some of the features that show evidence of being involved in ongoing linguistic change, including, for example, infamously like, quotative expressions, intensifiers, general extenders and swearwords. To develop a better understanding of teenage talk as a field of study, we will look at classic and more recent studies, and get some hands-on experience in the linguistic analysis of teenage talk in various exercises.

Shakespeare`s English (Proseminar)

“[P]rofit you in what you reade?” (TS 4.2.1762) – What may sound like a peculiar version of ‘German English’ to our ears, is in fact a well-formed interrogative sentence from a comedy written by one of the greatest English poets. Evidently, the language of William Shakespeare differs considerably from the Present-Day English we use today. This seminar sets out to systematically investigate the language of Shakespeare and will thereby provide first insights into the properties of Early Modern English. In the course of the semester, we will operate along the traditional lines of linguistic analysis and deal with Shakespeare´s orthography, pronunciation, vocabulary and syntax on the basis of his (non-modernized) works. Moreover, we will take into account some of the language-external factors of the period from 1500 to 1700, in order to acquire a deeper understanding of the worldview and attitudes that are reflected in the poet´s works. Hence, we may eventually be able to profit even more

Variational Pragmatics (Proseminar)

Situated at the interface between modern dialectology, pragmatics and sociolinguistics, the emerging field of variational pragmatics offers the possibility to investigate the impact of macro-social pragmatic variation on language in use. We are going to look at different (sub-)national language varieties of English (e.g. Irish English, New Zealand English, African American English), in order to shed light on the various ways in which language use is strongly influenced by factors such as region, class, ethnicity, gender, and age. Among others, we will be looking at the ways pragmatic phenomena, for instance, requests, compliment responses, promises, and greetings are being realised in different (regional) varieties of one language.

Analysing Evaluative Language - BLOCKVERANSTALTUNG (Übung) in der SCHWEIZ (Sion) (Übung)

The moment we communicate with each other, either through writing or through speaking, we explicitly or implicitly express our viewpoint on both the subject matter and on the context in which the communicative process takes place. At the same time we even try to make the receiver/audience agree to our view of the world by generating solidarity. The language, which we use to evaluate, greatly depends on the text type and the context both influencing not only how we express but also how we perceive certain attitudes. The present seminar discusses the many faces of evaluation in the areas of political discourse, narratives, historiography, media and scientific discourse. One aim of the course is to introduce students to a range of analytical techniques for the critical analysis of texts. To understand their effects within specific historical and socio-political contexts in which those texts were produced is yet another essential part of the seminar. Discourse Analysis (Übung)

This course is an introduction to the field of discourse analysis; the analysis of spoken and written language. We will discuss discursive concepts, e.g. cohesion, coherence, discourse markers, gambits, frames, etc.) and will clarify how texts are perceived as connected both on formal and functional grounds. However, we shall not only talk about the theoretical concepts connected to the study of discourse but also learn to analyse and critically assess discourse by drawing on a variety of practical examples and empirical data.

Morphology (Übung)

This course offers a thorough introduction to basic phenomena and concepts of morphology (e.g. inflexion, derivation, reduplication, compounding, productivity, etc.) and word formation (clippings, blends, acronyms, conversion, etc.). The following guiding questions will take centre stage in this process: Which structural rules & regularities inform word formation processes? Are words common only in certain contexts, are they used by certain social groups or people? How do cognitive concepts arise from linguistic forms and expressions; what does morphology and word word formation reveal about the way we think? How can we apply morphological phenomena (past tense –ed) to designate specific text types like descriptive, narrative or instructive texts? Note that this course is designed to enable students to reflect on and talk about their morphological problem solving strategies in class. While we will address and discuss theoretical issues, the main part of this course is dedicated to mor ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Reading Medieval Texts (Übung)

Old English and Middle English texts will be read, translated and discussed in this course. The discussion will deal with linguistic peculiarities, but where relevant also with the cultural background necessary for understanding the texts. Depending on the requirements of the participants more or less focus can be put on either of the two periods. Some experience with earlier forms of English is a precondition. N.B. This course is suitable for assisting in the preparation for the linguistic state exam..

Syntactic Structures (Übung)

In this course, students are invited to recapitulate and expand their knowledge in the field of syntactic analysis. Based on the Comprehensive Grammar of the English Language (CGEL; Quirk et al.), a systematic overview of the elementary categories and concepts (formal and functional) of English syntax will be provided and students will be encouraged to practice their skills in various exercises, including the hands-on analyses of authentic English sentences.

Ü Articulatory Phonetics (Übung)

In this class you will be introduced to all the articulatory organs and processes involved in the production of speech starting from the brain "giving orders" to the muscles and including the lungs creating airflow, the larynx creating voice as well as the supraglottal articulators that create speech sounds that finally leave your lips as air pressure fluctuations. The class will examine all the speech sounds possible in human languages, but of course there will be a special focus on the speech sounds of English and the characteristics best used to describe them.

Ü Grammar in Practice (Übung)

In this course, we will focus on various linguistic units of English and their grammatical description. Thereby, we shall systematically move from micro to macro, considering the structure of phrases, clauses and sentences, as well as the informational structure of the latter. Moving beyond the level of clause and sentence, we will also consider the grammar of discourse, covering, for instance, phenomena such as pragmatic markers and discourse relations. Along the way, we will discuss and compare – or sometimes just touch upon – major grammatical approaches to English, including, e.g., generative approaches, constituent and dependency grammars, as well as functional grammars and discourse grammars, and will get some practice applying various concepts of these frameworks to authentic data.

Ü Numbers and Quantifiers in New Englishes (Übung)

For decades, grammarians have formulated rules and regulations, either of the prescriptive or descriptive kind, in an attempt to systematize the grammar of the English language. More recently, the grammars of different varieties of English have undergone a process of codification, addressing the question of what is grammatically correct and what is grammatically incorrect - is there grammatical correctness or is it rather a question of acceptability. English varieties across the globe set new standards, form new 'rules', become unique, independent, languages of their own. This course will delve into the mysteries of quantifiers and numbers in new varieties of English, and explore this one aspect of language change that is happening as we speak.

Ü Prosodic Features (Übung)

This seminar focuses on the main prosodic/suprasegmental features duration, intensity and frequency. We will look both at their phonetic characteristics in the transmission (Acoustic Phonetics) and the reception/perception (Auditory Phonetics) of speech and their linguistic or paralinguistic function in terms of stress, intonation and the rhythmic structure of speech, i.e. addressing issues of Prosodic and Metrical Phonology.

Zugeordnete Lehrveranstaltungen: American Renaissance (Proseminar) The American Renaissance (1830-65) is said to be the first formative period of an independent American literature. The critic F.O. Matthiessen mentions the following five authors in his seminal work American Renaissance (1941): Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry David Thoreau, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Herman Melville and Walt Whitman. Over the last decades this narrow view of the literary epoch - as it includes only white male writers - has been criticized widely and now includes literature by women and ethnic minorities as well. Furthermore, the complex and often ambiguous meaning of the texts (both fictional and non-fictional) is taken into account. American Renaissance writers addressed the tensions that arose from the rapid industrialization, the role of both women and African Americans - and the dividing issue of slavery - within the democratic society and a growing distrust of Puritanism as well as the imminent Civil War. In this seminar we will read some of the most prominent works of the A ... While the flâneurs of the 19th and 20th centuries had been conceptualised as chroniclers and spectators of the city, who transformed their observations into literature, 21st-century flâneurs have undergone some significant changes with regards to their function within the text. Focussing on the flâneur's encounter with the crowd, today's flânerie texts largely concern themselves with ethical and political questions and use the motif of the flâneur as a model for different concepts of subject formation. Other texts employ the flâneur as a vehicle for a critique of capitalism, following in this Walter Benjamin's theses on the flâneur as commodity, while there's also a broad array of texts that turn to questions of migration and mobility in the 21st century. Historiographic Metafiction (Proseminar)

In a time that seems to be increasingly "post-truth" or "post-factual" and in which fake news and "alternative facts" exert influence on public debates and affairs, postmodern questions about the existence and knowability of truth(s) acquire enforced significance and topicality. Has the postmodern skepticism concerning the epistemological and even ontological possibility of universal truth opened the gateway for an historical and ideological relativism, a kind of factual agnosticism, which makes alternative facts possible? Or are we rather facing a gross misapplication of postmodernism's liberating and anti-ideological recognition of the existence of multiple truths? More than ever our media-saturated information society is confronted with the question: what is true and how can we know it? Probably no other literary form addresses this very question as directly and persistently as the kind of novel which Linda Hutcheon considers the epitome of postmodern writing and for which she has c

Lord Byron (Proseminar)

In this seminar we will approach the life and work of Lord George Gordon Noel Byron (1788-1824). Byron not only elaborated the literary archetype of the so-called "Byronic hero", but his life also epitomized that of the typical Romantic (anti)hero. The eccentric aristocrat's life was full of contradictions and marked by his efforts to flaunt his maverick reputation. Moreover, the rakish poet had numerous love affairs, travelled the world, and eventually died 1824 fighting against the Ottoman Empire in the Greek War of Independence. Based on classicist aesthetics, Byron's works are notorious for their use of satire, irony, and sarcasm. We will, at first, approach Lord Byron by reconstructing his most important biographical data. Afterwards we will discuss Byron's major works, including excerpts from his narrative poems "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage" (1812, 1816, 1818) and "Don Juan" (1819-24). In order to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their historical context and key

PS Mumbai Narratives (Proseminar)

The metropolis Mumbai, is one of the most densely populated places in the world. It is the 'gateway' to the West, whence colonizers not only entered, but also from where the British finally left in 1947. A multi-ethnic and multi-cultural city, India's commercial and financial center and home to the largest film industry of the world it is marked by its contradictions. Holding a promise of success, prosperity, freedom and fame, it has simultaneously been marked by a history of sectarian violence, poverty and dismal living conditions for many. In this course we will examine various fictional representations of Mumbai.

Shakespeare's Comedies (Proseminar)

More than 400 years after the Bard's death, Shakespeare's comedies are still performed in theatres around the world and continue to entertain present-day audiences with perhaps some of the funniest scenes ever devised for the stage. At the same time, the comedies frequently contain darker elements that are equally fascinating: the laughter comes at the expense of outsiders, who are "most notoriously abused" (thus Olivia on Malvolio in Twelfth Night) by the other characters, and often conflicts are resolved only superficially. In this seminar, students will be made familiar with concepts and conventions of stage comedy and the comical, as well as with cultural and historical backgrounds of Shakespeare's time that help in coming to grips with the world of Shakespeare's fools, fairies and fat knights. Various theoretical approaches to the plays read in class will be taken in order to find out how the humour of Shakespeare's comedies is created through elements of plot and – perhaps less e

Conflict Talk (Hauptseminar) Conflict is an ever-present, ubiquitous social phenomenon in our everyday lives. Whereas media constantly evoke new financial, ecological and social crises, a scientific investigation into the nature of conflict seems indispensable. In this seminar, we will approach conflict talk from a linguistic vantage point. On a micro-level, we shall probe conflict's verbal and interactional characteristics as well as prototypical discursive patterns. On a macro-level, we will learn about the social psychological reasons and social preconditions of conflict, establishing links between psychological insights and linguistic analyses to the phenomenon at hand. Topics will range from the emotional displays in verbal aggression, the interactional organization or the negotiation of conflictive viewpoints. We will also cover the social positioning of individuals in family discourse, review research on critical incidents in intercultural communication and discuss the phenomenon of flaming in computer-media ... HS Multilingualism (Hauptseminar) Multilingualism is a rampant phenomenon in today's world of globalization and the internet. HS Neurolinguistics (Hauptseminar)

Neurolinguistics aims to describe the relationship between the brain and linguistic function. You will be introduced to different concepts that aim to describe this relationship. A major part of the seminar will be covered by the study of language and speech disorders like, for example, aphasias (relating to damage in specific brain areas) and dysarthrias (relating to nerve damage), as these production impairments demonstrate the connection between linguistic abilities and brain anatomy. We will also look at agnosias as disorders of language reception and perception. In order to examine the exact causes for these disorders you will also be given an overview of modern methods of brain imaging.

multiculturalism articulates the politics of positioning. Here naming practices are significant in the delimitation and description of identity. This seminar considers names and naming in texts which arise from and reflect America's larger political debates on multiculturalism and ethnicities. Risking Thought: Conceptual Prose Writing in the 20th Century (Hauptseminar)

"Dieses Seminar provoziert gängige Vorstellungen der literarischen Moderne, wie auch der Postmoderne, als obskur, weltfern, elitär. Wir werden uns auf nicht-fiktionale Prosatexte konzentrieren, einem oft marginalisierten Genre, in dem eines jedoch ganz zentral ist: Autoren von W.E.B. DuBois bis Lyn Hejinian experimentieren mit dem Verhältnis von literarisch-metaphorischer Sprachlichkeit und konzeptueller Kritik, und verfassen Texte, die sowohl als poetische als auch als politische Praxis gelesen werden können. Diese Poetik-als-Praxis hat Parallelen im französischen Symbolismus wie auch in der 'Denkbild'-Tradition der Frankfurter Schule, und entwickelt Ausdruckformen, die der Vernetzung von Sprache und Ideologie einen Gegenpol bieten. Dieses Seminar diskutiert also die Frage, wie ästhetische Produktion nicht nur als eine Form der Kognition verstanden werden kann, sondern auch, wie dies politisch wirksam wird. Gleichzeitig bietet es Einblicke in das Werk zentraler Autoren des 20. Jahrhun

Stage Realism and the Problem Play: From Shaw to the Present (Hauptseminar)

Dramatic and narrative plots are often based on conventional formulas, ranging from Aristotle's general prescriptions for well-formed dramatic plots to 17th century Neoclassicist rules of drama and today's conventions for Hollywood's romantic comedies and other popular cinematic genres. The 19th-century realist genre of the well-made play (derived from the French pièce bien faite) was one such popular dramatic formula that dominated the British stage until it was challenged in the 1890s by the new model of the problem play (in the vein of Henrik Ibsen's successful plays). Despite much experimentation with dramatic form throughout the 20th century, stage realism, arguably, has remained a constant in British theatre. In this course, we will first look at theories of the well-made play and the problem play (e.g. in George Bernard Shaw's essays), before we discuss four late 19th-century plays during the transitional period from well-made play to problem play, as well as two 20th-century
