Introduction to English Linguistics

This course offers a comprehensive introduction to the linguistic study of English, explaining key concepts of language and linguistics in general. In particular, it will cover the description of all components of the English language together with the analytic fields dealing with them, namely linguistic sounds (phonetics and phonology), words (morphology, semantics), grammar (syntax), and language use (pragmatics). Furthermore, an insight into modern and historical variation in language will be provided. The lecture is complemented by the Übung Study Skills, which needs to be taken in the same semester. The final exam will cover both lecture and Übung. (N.B.: Obligatoriness depends on your Studiengang.)

Study Skills / Begleitübung (1)

This supplementary course to the lecture "Introduction to English Linguistics" is composed of two parts: On the one hand, it is meant to put a practical side to concepts and methods introduced in the introductory lecture with a view to the end-of-term exam. In this vein, we will dedicate some of the sessions to questions and discussions concerning the application of some of the central concepts in English linguistics. On the other hand, it is the aim of this course to provide you with the propaedeutic foundations you will need in order to write good term papers and succeed in your studies of linguistics. Amongst others, we will discuss the following questions: • Where can I find linguistic research literature and how do I deal with it? • How do I write a linguistic term paper? • How do I cite others and how do I present a bibliography in concordance to generally accepted conventions?

Introduction to American Literary Studies (Vorlesung) The course is designed to acquaint students with the terminology, methods, and techniques of literary studies (Part I) by analyzing texts taken from various literary periods and genres (Part II). The course thus offers a first overview of American literary history from the colonial period to the present. Students have to attend this lecture in combination with the "Supplementary Course: Introduction to American Literary Studies". It is advised to take them in the same semester.
Introduction to English Literary Studies This course introduces students to important concepts, genres, terms and methods of analysis in English literary studies. It offers systematic knowledge of genres in literary studies (poetry, drama, narrative), gives an introduction to the diverse theoretical contexts of the study of literature (literary theory), and provides basic information about the historical development of English literature. Furthermore, students will be made familiar with elementary techniques of research and essential study aids in English literary studies. Students are required to attend a supplementary course ("Begleitübung") or tutorial. There are three courses to choose from: Supp. Course A (C. Schönberger): Monday 10-11.30 a.m., room D 2003 Supp. Course B (M. Riedelsheimer/Stöckl): Wednesday 5.30-7 p.m., room D 1003 Tutorial Course (E. Supplementary Course (A): Introduction to English Literary Studies

This course accompanies the course "Introduction to English Literary Studies". It serves as a platform for expanding on the contents of the main introductory course. Since it is specifically designed to complement the said course, it should be attended in the same term. (Please note that it may not be combined with the course "Introduction to American Literature".) Students are required to attend this course alongside the main introductory course "Introduction to English Literary Studies".

(Please note that it may not be combined with the course "Introduction to American Literature".) Students are required to attend this course alongside the main introductory course "Introduction to English Literary Studies".

Supplementary Course: American Literary Studies (A)

This course is a supplement to the lecture course "Introduction to American Literary Studies." Participants will be provided the opportunity to acquire a variety of skills needed for effectively and successfully studying Anglophone literatures in general, and American literature in particular. In the first half of the semester, students will get to know basic academic working standards and encounter a range of important methods and techniques. In the second half, we will build on and implement the subject matter taught in the main lecture course by reading, discussing, and analyzing a number of literary texts in smaller groups and a more practice-oriented environment. Participants are required to read and prepare all of the assigned texts on time and share their responses during discussions.

Phonology (Seminar) The seminar introduces students to basic phonological concepts (as opposed to descriptive phonetics) and describes the major phonological processes occurring in various varieties of English. The analysis is extended to offer a thorough examination of the relationship between phonological rules and representations by looking at various phonological processes in the languages of the world. This will allow us to discover specific phenomena (e.g. rule ordering, absolute neutralization etc.) that will provide us with insight into the general principles of phonological organization. The seminar also covers the representation of phonemes in the form of feature trees and connects phonological with morphological processes via Lexical Phonology. Topics in Functional Grammar (Dozent: Matthias Klumm) (Seminar) Unlike formal approaches to grammar, which consider grammar as a set of rules specifying all possible grammatical structures of a language, functional approaches to grammar are concerned with how language is used to achieve various purposes in different social contexts. This course will focus on one particular functional approach to grammar, i.e. Halliday's Systemic Functional Grammar (SFG), which sees language as a system that represents a resource for speakers to express particular functions in social interaction. The aim of this course is threefold: (1) to introduce students to the basic tenets and key concepts of SFG (e.g. nominal group, mood/modality, cohesion, theme/rheme, process/participant); (2) to give students the opportunity to practically apply these principles by analyzing sentences from different text types; (3) to compare the key topics underlying SFG with more traditional approaches to grammar, notably Quirk et al.'s Comprehensive Grammar of the English Language.

Varieties of English (Vorlesung)

Languages are characterized by variation manifest in regional and social variation, as well as variation caused by the field of discourse and medium. This is particularly true for the English language. The global spread of English has not only resulted in the emergence of a diverse range of second-language varieties in the former British colonies, but also to an unmarked variant, international English or English as a lingua franca. This lecture offers a comprehensive introduction to English and Englishes focussing on national standards of English (British, American, Scots, Hiberno-English, Canadian, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Caribbean English), and their regional varieties in the frameworks of phonological, morphological, syntactic, lexical and socio-pragmatic variation. Basic Phonetics (Übung)

This class offers an introduction to the principles of Phonetics and Phonology, including the articulatory basis and feature descriptions of especially the phonemes and allophones that occur in the major varieties of English. There will be a practical focus on both British (RP) and American (GA) standard pronunciations as well on phonological transcriptions both using IPA (an account of the organizational principles of the IPA will be provided as well) and, for students of the "Lehramt", the systems expected in the Bavarian state exams.

Basics in Morphology and Word Formation (Dozent: Matthias Klumm) (Übung)

In this course we will investigate in detail the internal structure of English words and the various processes that can be employed to enrich the lexicon by means of word-formation. After discussing the basic notions and key concepts in English morphology (e.g. word, word form, lexeme, morpheme etc.), we will take a closer look at various morphemic and non-morphemic word-formation patterns of present-day English (e.g. compounding, derivation, conversion, clipping etc.) from different perspectives. Whenever necessary, we will take a diachronic perspective and look, for instance, at the inflectional system or the productivity of certain word-formation patterns in different periods of English. There will be abundant opportunity to apply and practice morphological analyses in class.

Topics in Semantics (Übung)

Topics in Syntax (Übung)

In this course, we will focus on various linguistic units of English and their grammatical description. Thereby, we shall systematically move from micro to macro, considering the structure of phrases, clauses and sentences, as well as the functions of their constitutive elements. Moving beyond the level of clause and sentence, we will also briefly consider the structure of discourse, focusing on the thematic and informational structure of sentences in discourse and on the way(s) in which sentences are connected. To this end, we will be discussing and comparing major grammatical approaches to English over the course of the semester and will get some practice applying various concepts of these grammars to authentic data.

American Modernism (Proseminar) In the late 19th and early 20th century, society was transformed by technological advances, new philosophical movements, urbanization and historical events with far-reaching consequences. These shifts can be traced throughout the entire range of the arts in the international phenomenon of modernism. In this seminar, we will read some of the most prominent works of American Modernism by writers who were not only formative for their time, but who are also a huge influence in American Studies today. We will discuss the works' cultural-historical backgrounds as well as a variety of literary terms and critical concepts. We will further try to establish connections also to other artistic movements - outside of literature - that have influenced modernist writers. Please be aware that this will be a reading-intensive course and students are expected to read all of the texts. Students must obtain their own copies of the novels (William Faulkner's The Sound and the Fury; Djuna Barnes' Nightwood) ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)
Ian McEwan (Proseminar) Ian McEwan (*1948) is one of the most prominent contemporary British novelists. Ever since the 1970s he has been a central figure in the British literary scene. After gaining some notoriety for describing unusual and macabre sexual desires in his earlier fiction (e.g. The Cement Garden or In Between the Sheets), McEwan in his later novels most frequently touches on topics such as the role of science in contemporary society and the relationship between literature and science, history and ways of narrating the past, as well as ethics and ethical challenges arising in present-day society. McEwan has also been an outspoken commentator of political events, such as 9/11 (<https://www.theguardian.com/world/2001/sep/15/september11.politicsphilosophyandsociety2>) or Brexit (<https://www.theguardian.com/books/2017/jun/02/ian-mcewan-denialist-confessions-remainer-brexit>) and remains a strong voice in British cultural and intellectual life. In-Yer-Face Theatre (Proseminar)

By the middle of the 1990s, a new sensibility and a new theatrical aesthetics had established itself as the norm in British theatre. Plays by new, young playwrights both outraged and fascinated audiences and critics with their blatantly aggressive portrayal of violence and sex, obscene language, and shocking imagery. Soon critics and scholars applied a variety of terms to what appeared to be a new style of writing ('New Brutalism', 'Neo-Jacobeanism', 'Theatre of Urban Ennui') and to its authors ('Britpack', 'Blood and Sperm Generation'). By now, the term 'in-yer-face theatre' has gained universal acceptance for describing this theatrical phenomenon which, since the beginning of the new millennial, is widely considered already a thing of the past. Famously defined by Aleks Sierz as "drama that takes the audience by the scruff of the neck and shakes it until it gets the message," as "touching nerves and provoking alarm," and as "experiential, not speculative," in-yer-face theatre has und

Memory and Literature (Proseminar)

In this course we will explore the theme of (individual and cultural) memory in English literature. After a comprehensive survey of major discourses (psychological, cultural, historical etc.) on the phenomenon of memory, we will analyze its thematic and aesthetic manifestations in various literary texts across genres and periods. This seminar can be combined with the following supplementary courses ("Übungen"): "Reading Contemporary Plays" "Narrative Analysis" "Drama Analysis" "Study Trip to New York City" "Study Trip to London"

PS Feminist Dystopias (Proseminar)

In this course we will trace the shifts and continuities in feminist dystopian fiction since the late 1960s. Following an introduction to some of the central concerns and interests of feminist movements of the 20th and 21st century, we will discuss how this social and political activism is addressed in dystopian literature. Based on our readings of Ursula K. Le Guin's The Left Hand of Darkness, The Handmaid's Tale by Margaret Atwood, Octavia Butler's Dawn and Nnedi Okorafor's Who Fears Death, we will examine how these novels may function as cautionary tales about the consequences of patriarchy and rigid conceptualizations of gender, sexuality and 'race', while simultaneously exploring the interplay between dystopian and utopian fiction. Please purchase the following editions of the novels: Atwood, Margaret. The Handmaid's Tale. 1985. Vintage Classics, 2010. Butler, Octavia. Dawn. 1987. Aspect, 1997. Le Guin, Ursula K. American Literature and Culture, 1800-1865 (Übung)

The first half of the 19th century marked a time of momentous cultural developments for the young United States of America. Not only was it a period of rapid and far-reaching technological change, but it also saw the emergence of a whole series of social and political reform movements addressing issues ranging from the evils of slavery to women's rights, and from religious doctrines to experiments in alternative living. Politically, the tensions that built up in this period culminated in the American Civil War, the assassination of Abraham Lincoln and the abolition of slavery. Culturally, they were accompanied by a virtual explosion of creativity that led to the first powerful flowering of American literature, represented by writers such as Nathaniel Hawthorne, Henry David Thoreau, Frederick Douglass, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Walt Whitman, or Emily Dickinson. In this class, we will study and discuss a selection of significant fictional as well as non-fictional texts in order to gain a so

Die Literatur der englischen Romantik, Teil III (Vorlesung)

Nachdem die Vorlesung in den vergangenen 2 Semestern mit der philosophisch-historischen und poetologischen Grundlegung des Verständnisses der englischen Romantik beschäftigt hat, werden nun im Wintersemester die systematischen Fragen nach Historismus, Subjektivität/Individualismus, Naturkonzeption und Dichtungstheorie/Dichtungssprache auf das Werk der wichtigsten romantischen AutorInnen bezogen. Dabei wird der Schwerpunkt auf zunächst auf den LyrikerInnen liegen, und dann werden sich Vorlesungen dezidiert auch mit der Entwicklung des Romans von Jane Austen bis Walter Scott beschäftigen. Zudem werden die Bedingungen des Dramas/Theaters in der Zeit der Romantik an zentralen Beispielen diskutiert. Historisch wird die englische Romantik über zwei Semester als Schwellenzeitzwischen Neoklassizismus und Aufklärung auf der einen und dem viktorianischen Zeitalter auf der anderen Seite dargestellt - als eine Zeit, in der unwiderruflich die bürgerliche Moderne beginnt. Drama Analysis (Übung)

This course provides students with the basic skills needed for analysing drama. We will discuss and apply the most essential concepts of drama analysis, from ancient and early modern theories of tragedy and the distinction between absolute and epic drama to methods of figure characterization, the categories of time and space, and contemporary discussions concerning the relation between text and performance. We will work with two full-length plays (to be announced soon) and excerpts from various plays from different historical periods and of different genres. Both primary and secondary literature will be made available via DigiCampus. Drama Analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory) and is offered once every year.

Ecogames (Übung)

Blockseminar in January or February 2018! The seminar will introduce students to a branch of video game studies that employs an ecocritical perspective to analyse games. Thereby, we will survey the field of ecocriticism in order to expose its underlying methods and themes and combine these findings with recent insights from game studies. The game selection will be diverse and include indie game productions as well as AAA games. Although some of these games are extensive in length, I urge students to play as many of them as possible to contribute to a fruitful discussion. Requirements for the course thus include: active participation, reading the texts, and playing the games. Game selection: Abzû (505 Games, 2016; PC, PS4, Xbox One) Everything (David O'Reilly, 2017; PC, PS4) Shelter 2 (Might and Delight, 2015; PC) NieR: Automata (Platinum Games, 2017; PS4, PC) The Legend of Zelda: Breath of the Wild (Nintendo, 2016; Switch, Wii U)

Introduction to Literary and Cultural Theory (Übung)

What is literature? What is the relationship between literature, culture, and the world? What are appropriate ways of interpreting literary texts? - Such are the questions to be addressed in this course, which is designed to give interested students a concise introduction to the main schools and movements of contemporary literary/cultural theory. For that purpose, coursework in each session will consist of (a) reading and discussing introductory texts on key theories and concepts, and (b) trying to apply them to the practical analysis of literature. Our test case shall be Joseph Conrad's short narrative Heart of Darkness, which participants need to have read by the beginning of term! (See also 'Literaturhinweise' in the 'Beschreibungen' category below.)

Narrative Analysis (Übung)

This course aims to introduce central principles of narrative analysis and deepen students' knowledge of these categories. Key areas are: - Narrative situation (Who speaks? Who perceives?) - Strategies of rendering consciousness in narrative - Time and space in narrative - Unreliability The basic framework will be provided by Gérard Genette's structuralist model of narratology (which we will compare against Franz K. Stanzel's triadic model of narrative situations), but where appropriate other relevant narratological theories will be introduced.

Besides reading and discussing the theoretical foundations of narrative analysis, there will be a focus on applying the analytical tools provided by narratology, which means students will get ample opportunities to practise their newly gained knowledge. The analytic framework this course seeks to trace is fundamental for a profound understanding of all narrative fiction and is therefore essential both with regard to writing term papers on prose ... Survey of English Literature III: Romantic Period to Victorian Age (Übung)

This survey course is the third of a four-part series covering English literary history from the 16th century to the present. This term we will focus on English literature of the 19th century, and thus include the Romantic period and the Victorian Age. In this course, participants are expected to read a wide range of textual samples and examples by relevant authors. A reader with assorted texts will be made available at the beginning of term. Besides that, students are required to obtain their own copies of the following texts: • Mary Shelley, Frankenstein (1831 text) • Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre • Charles Dickens, Hard Times • Joseph Conrad, Heart of Darkness It is highly advisable to read at least one of these before the beginning of term in order to alleviate the reading load during the semester.

Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

This course/Übung outlines some of the most relevant concepts for cultural analysis, including different notions of 'culture' itself. Drawing from a cultural studies framework and examples from current debates, we will analyze how questions of representation and power tie in with concepts and notions of 'identity', the 'nation', as well as 'race', 'class', 'gender' and 'ability' in the discursive field of culture. Examples and discussions from popular culture and cultural activism for social change complement our inquiry into the functions and effects of cultural representation.

(Critical) Stylistics (Seminar) The course will provide a general overview of stylistics, focusing mainly on contemporary approaches of the main theoretical issues in the discipline (e.g. forensic stylistics, literary stylistics, corpus stylistics...etc.). The 'critical' in critical stylistics is founded on discourse analytical approaches used for explaining the impact of texts, taking into consideration the social and political contexts in which texts are produced and read. Furthermore, we will be looking at the different ways in which ideologies are contained in the language we use, e.g. through modality, opposition and transitivity. Another aim of the course is to introduce students to a range of analytical techniques for the critical analysis of texts. To understand their effects within specific historical and socio-political contexts in which those texts were produced is yet another essential part of the seminar. ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)
Dialectology (Seminar) This seminar consists of a theory-based dialectological part and a descriptive part. First, we will look at the importance of mechanisms and causes of language change, which lead to the formation of new dialects and eventually languages (geographical and sociological aspects are considered especially). The second part will then provide an overview of dialectal variation in the English-speaking world, covering the British Isles, North America and the southern hemisphere (Australia, New Zealand, South Africa).

Foreign Accent (Seminar)

Foreign accent is an unavoidable problem for all adult learners - or is it? In any case there certainly are big individual differences between speakers. A lot of factors are responsible for why someone may be better than someone else, and this class will cover them all: age/neural organization, motivation, experience, input, personality, learning styles, memory etc. The class will also introduce different forms (segmental and prosodic) and models of foreign accent that may predict problems and errors and allow us to improve or perhaps even sound native (sometimes ...). Finally, this seminar will also describe different methods of instruction and discuss the perception of foreign accent in society.

Language in Computer-Mediated Discourse (Seminar)

Sociolinguistics (Dozent: Matthias Klumm) (Seminar)

For more than half a century already, sociolinguistics – the study of language in its social context – has been a major field of study within linguistics. In this seminar we take both a theoretical and hands-on approach to the fundamental issues sociolinguists have been concerned with over the past few decades, including language variation and change, language contact, the relationship between language use and social identity, as well as language planning and language policy. These topics will be examined by means of representative case studies on various dialects and varieties of English around the world. In addition, as methodology is important for any kind of empirical research, we will discuss and practice some of the methods for collecting and analyzing sociolinguistic data.
