Inhalte:

Literaturenschaftliche Grundfragen und Arbeitstechniken, sowie Grundlagen der Geschichte englischsprachiger Literaturen

Lernziele/Kompetenzen:

Fachlich:

Die Studierenden erwerben Grundkenntnisse in literaturwissenschaftlichen Arbeits- und Analysetechniken sowie der Geschichte englischsprachiger Literaturen. Sie sind in der Lage, grundlegende fachwissenschaftliche Methoden, Termini und Analyseverfahren an Beispielen aus der Geschichte der englischsprachigen Literaturen anzuwenden.

Methodisch:

Die Studierenden erwerben Grundkompetenzen im Umgang mit den Epochen- und Gattungsbegriffen der englischen Literaturen am Beispiel ausgewählter Autor*innen und Werke. Dabei lernen sie, längeren Instruktionsphasen konzentriert zu folgen und diese in eigenständigen Notizen festzuhalten, um das gesammelte Wissen in angeleiteten sowie selbständig zu bearbeitenden Übungen/Übungsaufgaben anzuwenden. Sie fassen Informationen, unter anderem aus literaturwissenschaftlichen Grundlagentexten, zusammen und übertragen sie somit in ihre eigene Wissensstruktur. Darüber hinaus erwerben Sie die Kompetenz, selbständig und eigenverantwortlich mit den fachwissenschaftlichen Beständen der Universitätsbibliothek eigene Recherchearbeiten durchzuführen.

Sozial/personal/kommunikativ:

Verschiedene grundlegende Formen wissenschaftlicher Kommunikation werden eingeübt, insbesondere jene der englischen Sprache im akademischen Stilregister. Entwicklung fachlicher Neugier und eines diskursiven Denkstils.

Bemerkung:

Dieses Modul ist an einem der angegebenen Lehrstühle (ALW oder ELW) zu erbringen. Die Prüfung ist dem gewählten Lehrstuhl zugeordnet. Dies ist bei der Prüfungsanmeldung zu beachten.

SWS: 2

Zugeordnete Lehrveranstaltungen:

Introduction to American Literary Studies (Vorlesung)

The course is designed to acquaint students with the terminology, methods, and techniques of literary studies (Part I) by analyzing texts taken from various literary periods and genres (Part II). The course thus offers a first overview of American literary history from the colonial period to the present. BA-students and students of Lehramt Gymnasium are required to attend this lecture in combination with the "Supplementary Course: Introduction to American Literary Studies".

Introduction to English Literary Studies

This course introduces students to important concepts, genres, terms and methods of analysis in English literary studies. It offers systematic knowledge of genres in literary studies (poetry, drama, narrative), gives an introduction to the diverse theoretical contexts of the study of literature (literary theory), and provides basic information about the historical development of English literature. Furthermore, students will be made familiar with elementary techniques of research and essential study aids in English literary studies. Students are required to attend a supplementary course ("Begleitübung") or tutorial. There are two courses to choose from: Supp. Course (C. Schönberger): Thursday 8.15-9.45 a.m., Tutorial Course (L. Bittner): Tuesday 10-11.30 a.m. All courses start in the second week of term. Watch this space for details (and also additional tasks, information and materials during the term).

Supplementary Course: American Literary Studies

This course is a supplement to the lecture course "Introduction to American Literary Studies." Participants will be provided the opportunity to acquire a variety of skills needed for effectively and successfully studying Anglophone literatures in general, and American literature in particular. In the first half of the semester, students will get to know basic academic working standards and encounter a range of important methods and techniques. In the second half, we will build on and implement the subject matter taught in the main lecture course by reading, discussing, and analyzing a number of literary texts in smaller groups and a more practice-oriented environment. Participants are required to read and prepare all of the assigned texts on time and share their responses during discussions. BA-students and students of Lehramt Gymnasium are required to attend this course in combination with the lecture "Introduction to American Literary Studies".

Supplementary Course: Introduction to English Literary Studies

This course accompanies the course "Introduction to English Literary Studies". It serves as a platform for expanding on the contents of the main introductory course. Since it is specifically designed to complement the said course, it should be attended in the same term. (Please note that it may not be combined with the course "Introduction to American Literature".) Students are required to attend this course alongside the main introductory course "Introduction to English Literary Studies".

Modul EAS-2011 (= BacWBA-EKS): Linguistics: Introduction (V +Ü, 6 LP) (= Basismodul Sprachwissenschaft Englisch)

6 ECTS/LP

Version 2.0.0 (seit WS17/18)

Modulverantwortliche/r: Prof. Dr. Claudia Claridge

Prof. Dr. Anita Fetzer

Inhalte:

Einführung in die Grundlagen der englischen Sprachwissenschaft und der modernen englischen Grammatik, im Besonderen in die Kerngebiete der Syntax, Morphologie, Phonetik/Phonologie, Semantik und Pragmatik sowie deren jeweiligen Basiskategorien. Anwendung der Theorie auf ausgewählte kontextualisierte sprachliche Phänomene. Hilfsmittel für wissenschaftliches Arbeiten und sprachwissenschaftliche Arbeitstechniken.

Lernziele/Kompetenzen:

Fachlich:

Allgemeine Kenntnisse der Begrifflichkeiten und Systematik der modernen englischen Sprachwissenschaft, speziell der englischen deskriptiven und funktionalen Grammatik auf wissenschaftlicher Basis, des englischen Sprachgebrauchs und dessen Angemessenheit in unterschiedlichen Kontexten. Fähigkeit zur sprachwissenschaftlichen Analyse und kritischen Reflektion auf den Gebieten der Syntax, Morphologie, Phonetik/ Phonologie, Semantik und Pragmatik.

Methodisch:

Kompetenz in linguistischen Arbeitsmethoden, wie u.a. Deskription, empirische Datenanalyse (quantitativ und qualitativ), kontrastive Analyse. Anwendung einfacher Testverfahren. Integrativer Erwerb von sprachwissenschaftlichen Techniken des wissenschaftlichen Arbeitens.

Sozial/personal/kommunikativ:

Strategien zur Aneignung von fachwissenschaftlicher Einführungsliteratur sowie deren kritischer Reflektion und Diskussion. Fähigkeit zur Präsentation von Fachwissen sowie dessen Operationalisierung und kritischer Würdigung im Kontext. Angemessene sprachliche Darstellung. Zeitmanagement

Bemerkung:

VL Introduction to English Linguistics (Vorlesung)

GK Introduction to English Linguistics (Mo 10.00-11.30h) This course provides an introduction to the specifics of language structure and language function. After a general introduction to the nature and structure of the English language, we study the various components of a language, such as speech sounds (phonetics and phonology), words and their internal structure (morphology), phrases and sentence structure (syntax), meaning of words and sentences (semantics), and meaning of utterances in communication (pragmatics). In addition, we look at the relations between language and society, language and communication, and language and education.

BÜ Begleitübung zur Einführung in die Englische Sprachwissenschaft (Kurs A)

This companion course for the Introduction to English Linguistics has two components: On one hand, the topics covered in the Introduction are discussed at greater length to prepare you for the module exam. Thus, questions regarding general linguistics, structuralism, phonetics/phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics as well as pragmatics and the history of English will be actively discussed in groups. On the other hand, basic study skills needed to successfully complete your study of linguistics and fulfill the requirements of seminar-type courses will be developed. Questions such as the following will be answered: What actually is academic research? What are its methods? How do I write a term paper? How do I use quotations? How do I write a References section? Please note: Beginning with the winter term 2012/13, students are required to enroll in the Introduction to English Linguistics and the Übung Study Skills in the same semester because according to the new modularized LPO UA (20

English Lexicology (Seminar)

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module.

This seminar offers a comprehensive introduction to all relevant aspects of the vocabulary of English. Informed by modern linguistic theory, we will explore the general composition and history of the English lexicon as well as the semantic and morphological structure of lexemes. Questions concerning productivity and the new formation of words as well as issues of polysemy, metaphor and the representation of words in dictionaries will be addressed and, hence, students will be invited to expand and deepen their general understanding of the English vocabulary.

PS Sequential Art in Postcolonial Contexts (Proseminar)

This course introduces students to the analysis of sequential art as a form of expression which combines textual and visual language. Based on a discussion of a range of critical approaches to the study of graphic novels, comics and cartoons, we examine how these mediums can be used to engage with central concepts and debates in postcolonial studies. Our discussion will focus on aspects such as the representation of traumatic histories, experiences of (forced) migration, relationships of power and processes of racialization. Primary texts include Art Spiegelman's Maus, the graphic novel adaptation of Octavia Butler's Kindred, Persepolis by Marjane Satrapi, the journalistic comics The Unwanted and Madaya Mom, as well as a selection of Marvel's Black Panther comics. Students are expected to have read the following primary sources in preparation for the respective sessions: Art Spiegelman, The Complete Maus (Penguin, 2003 edition) Damian Duffy and John Jennings, Kindred (Abrams, 2016) Mar

Pragmatics (Seminar)

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This seminar constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding practical course (Übung) to complete the module. -- We do not always say what we mean; still we somehow manage to understand each other. The study of pragmatics sheds light on this and other phenomena by looking at the ways we use language and at how our beliefs and intentions affect not only the form but also the interpretation of our utterances. The present course covers the key topics within pragmatics such as implicature, presupposition, deixis, politeness and speech acts as well as newer areas of research (e.g. Relevance Theory and neo-Gricean theories). Students are encouraged to engage in the pragmatic analysis of spoken and written data by applying the acquired theoretical concepts.

Refugees in Anglophone Prose (Proseminar)

According to the UNHCR, 65,5 million people are forcibly displaced worldwide. Of those, 22,5 million are considered to be refugees, another 10 million stateless (http://www.unhcr.org/figures-at-a-glance.html). But who exactly is a refugee? And who is not? What are the differences between stateless and internally displaced persons and refugees? What are their rights? How is 'refugeeness' related to personal identity? What are commonalities between seemingly different groups? Can literature help us gain insight into those questions? In the context of these and other questions, we will look at philosophical and theoretical texts from Hannah Arendt to Seyla Benhabib to Joseph Carens. Politically and legally, we will consider US laws as well as the Geneva Convention and definitions by the UNHCR, always also asking questions of basic human rights and ethical responsibility. Further important aspects will be the distinction of refugee studies from other related fields, while considering simil ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Semantics (Seminar)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This seminar constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding practical course (Übung) to complete the module. -- In this course we will recapitulate and broaden our Knowledge of semantics as covered in the lecture "Introduction to Linguistics. In doing so, we will focus on two different approaches to the study of meaning in language: classic schools tend to treat semantics as a separate discipline, distinct from e.g. phonology, morphology, or syntax. The categories discussed in traditional semantics include lexical meaning, sentence meaning, and utterance meaning (if pragmatics is considered as overlapping with or as a part of semantics). Cognitive linguistic approaches to semantics, on the other hand, argue in functionalist, rather than in formalist terms. Their claim is that linguistic knowledge is intertwined with other cognitive skills (such as perception, thought, or memory), just as semant ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Shakespeare's Poetry (Proseminar)

The aim of this course is to give a comprehensive introduction to William Shakespeare's poetry. We will approach his poetical works by a close reading of "Venus and Adonis", "The Rape of Lucrece", "A Lover's Complaint", "The Phoenix and the Turtle", as well as of selected sonnets. In order to be able to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their socio-historical context and key concepts of Renaissance humanism and the Elizabethan era.

Systemic Functional Linguistics (Seminar)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This seminar constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding practical course (Übung) to complete the module. -- The course introduces students to the theory of Systemic Functional Linguistics (developed by Michael Halliday). The approach not only provides explanations of the relation of language resources and context, it also offers explanations for the particular construction of a text and its communicative goal across various types of texts. In this way, the theory proves highly beneficial for all kinds of discourse enquiries, as its method of grammatical analysis enables researchers to, for instance, identify and label specific linguistic patterns that reflect the influence of power and ideologies on language choices. The course, thus, features practical exercises, which complement the theoretical introduction.

The End – and After? Contemporary Post-Apocalyptic Fiction (Proseminar)

Although there have always been texts that imagine the end of the world as we know it, recent years have seen a flurry of novels that thematise the apocalypse. In this seminar we will look at three examples of novels from the English-speaking world that are concerned with the end—and particularly with what comes after, i.e. with life after a disaster that has destroyed or at least fundamentally changed human civilisation. The depiction of life after such a great all-destroying cataclysm raises a number of questions: - In what ways do these texts tackle the reasons for the catastrophe and act, in typical dystopian fashion, as warning and critique? - Which cultural features are associated with the apocalypse? - What are the consequences of surviving the cataclysm? - Why does storytelling continue after the cataclysm? - What is the status of literature after the end of civilisation? The novels we will discuss are: Cormack McCarthy, The Road (2006) Jeanette Winterson, The Stone Gods (2007) ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

The Short Story in the United States and Canada (Proseminar)

This course will disappoint those who believe that short stories are an easy read because they are, after all, what the term indicates: short. In this brevity lies the great art and potential of the genre: short stories are considerably dense and multifold, they often create an intensity of feeling that remains unparalleled even in novels. The short story's potential to move us, to set our thoughts in motion, is a central reason for the genre's popularity and success in the American and Canadian context—and if we want to know more about America's and Canada's evolution as nations, or what it means to belong to those societies, we should turn attention to the "shorts" of Washington Irving, Herman Melville, Louisa May Alcott, Zora Neal Hurston, Ernest Hemingway, Langston Hughes, Joan Didion, Annie Proulx, Margaret Atwood, Alice Munro, Mavis Gallant, Ruth Ozeki, Marvis...—not only as a source of information but, first and foremost, as an invitation to embark on a journey into the unknown, I ... Theatre of the Absurd (Proseminar)

In the 1950s, Europe saw the rise of a new form of drama that irritated traditional theatre critics and audiences and was met with utter incomprehension outside the small avant-garde and experimentalist circles in which it started to develop. Neither being part of a coherent movement nor following a 'manifesto' or underlying theory that would have explained their peculiar aesthetics to a wider audience, these plays were only linked together by the similar ways they frustrated conventional theatre expectations with their lack of closure and finality, absence of plausible characters, presentation of dysfunctional communication, use of tragicomedy as primary dramatic genre, and, above all, the absurdity of the dramatic situation. In his seminal monograph _The Theatre of the Absurd_ (1961), Martin Esslin provided the first and still most influential attempt to subsume these aesthetically similar plays under a thematic Leitmotif when he explained them as theatrical expressions of existentia

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This seminar constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding practical course (Übung) to complete the module. -- We do not always say what we mean; still we somehow manage to understand each other. The study of pragmatics sheds light on this and other phenomena by looking at the ways we use language and at how our beliefs and intentions affect not only the form but also the interpretation of our utterances. The present course covers the key topics within pragmatics such as implicature, presupposition, deixis, politeness and speech acts as well as newer areas of research (e.g. Relevance Theory and neo-Gricean theories). Refugees in Anglophone Prose (Proseminar)

According to the UNHCR, 65,5 million people are forcibly displaced worldwide. Of those, 22,5 million are considered to be refugees, another 10 million stateless (http://www.unhcr.org/figures-at-a-glance.html). But who exactly is a refugee? And who is not? What are the differences between stateless and internally displaced persons and refugees? What are their rights? How is 'refugeeness' related to personal identity? What are commonalities between seemingly different groups? Can literature help us gain insight into those questions? In the context of these and other questions, we will look at philosophical and theoretical texts from Hannah Arendt to Seyla Benhabib to Joseph Carens. Politically and legally, we will consider US laws as well as the Geneva Convention and definitions by the UNHCR, always also asking questions of basic human rights and ethical responsibility. Further important aspects will be the distinction of refugee studies from other related fields, while considering simil ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Semantics (Seminar)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This seminar constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding practical course (Übung) to complete the module. -- In this course we will recapitulate and broaden our Knowledge of semantics as covered in the lecture "Introduction to Linguistics. In doing so, we will focus on two different approaches to the study of meaning in language: classic schools tend to treat semantics as a separate discipline, distinct from e.g. phonology, morphology, or syntax. The categories discussed in traditional semantics include lexical meaning, sentence meaning, and utterance meaning (if pragmatics is considered as overlapping with or as a part of semantics). Cognitive linguistic approaches to semantics, on the other hand, argue in functionalist, rather than in formalist terms. Shakespeare's Poetry (Proseminar)

The aim of this course is to give a comprehensive introduction to William Shakespeare's poetry. We will approach his poetical works by a close reading of "Venus and Adonis", "The Rape of Lucrece", "A Lover's Complaint", "The Phoenix and the Turtle", as well as of selected sonnets. In order to be able to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their socio-historical context and key concepts of Renaissance humanism and the Elizabethan era.

Systemic Functional Linguistics (Seminar)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This seminar constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding practical course (Übung) to complete the module. -- The course introduces students to the theory of Systemic Functional Linguistics (developed by Michael Halliday). The approach not only provides explanations of the relation of language resources and context, it also offers explanations for the particular construction of a text and its communicative goal across various types of texts. In this way, the theory proves highly beneficial for all kinds of discourse enquiries, as its method of grammatical analysis enables researchers to, for instance, identify and label specific linguistic patterns that reflect the influence of power and ideologies on language choices. The course, thus, features practical exercises, which complement the theoretical introduction.

The End – and After? Contemporary Post-Apocalyptic Fiction (Proseminar)

Although there have always been texts that imagine the end of the world as we know it, recent years have seen a flurry of novels that thematise the apocalypse. In this seminar we will look at three examples of novels from the English-speaking world that are concerned with the end—and particularly with what comes after, i.e. with life after a disaster that has destroyed or at least fundamentally changed human civilisation. The depiction of life after such a great all-destroying cataclysm raises a number of questions: - In what ways do these texts tackle the reasons for the catastrophe and act, in typical dystopian fashion, as warning and critique? - Which cultural features are associated with the apocalypse? - What are the consequences of surviving the cataclysm? - Why does storytelling continue after the cataclysm? - What is the status of literature after the end of civilisation? The novels we will discuss are: Cormack McCarthy, The Road (2006) Jeanette Winterson, The Stone Gods (2007) ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

The Short Story in the United States and Canada (Proseminar)

This course will disappoint those who believe that short stories are an easy read because they are, after all, what the term indicates: short. In this brevity lies the great art and potential of the genre: short stories are considerably dense and multifold, they often create an intensity of feeling that remains unparalleled even in novels. The short story's potential to move us, to set our thoughts in motion, is a central reason for the genre's popularity and success in the American and Canadian context—and if we want to know more about America's and Canada's evolution as nations, or what it means to belong to those societies, we should turn attention to the "shorts" of Washington Irving, Herman Melville, Louisa May Alcott, Zora Neal Hurston, Ernest Hemingway, Langston Hughes, Joan Didion, Annie Proulx, Margaret Atwood, Alice Munro, Mavis Gallant, Ruth Ozeki, Marvis...—not only as a source of information but, first and foremost, as an invitation to embark on a journey into the unknown, I ... Theatre of the Absurd (Proseminar)

In the 1950s, Europe saw the rise of a new form of drama that irritated traditional theatre critics and audiences and was met with utter incomprehension outside the small avant-garde and experimentalist circles in which it started to develop. Neither being part of a coherent movement nor following a 'manifesto' or underlying theory that would have explained their peculiar aesthetics to a wider audience, these plays were only linked together by the similar ways they frustrated conventional theatre expectations with their lack of closure and finality, absence of plausible characters, presentation of dysfunctional communication, use of tragicomedy as primary dramatic genre, and, above all, the absurdity of the dramatic situation. In his seminal monograph _The Theatre of the Absurd_ (1961), Martin Esslin provided the first and still most influential attempt to subsume these aesthetically similar plays under a thematic Leitmotif when he explained them as theatrical expressions of existentia

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module.

This seminar offers a comprehensive introduction to all relevant aspects of the vocabulary of English. Informed by modern linguistic theory, we will explore the general composition and history of the English lexicon as well as the semantic and morphological structure of lexemes. Questions concerning productivity and the new formation of words as well as issues of polysemy, metaphor and the representation of words in dictionaries will be addressed and, hence, students will be invited to expand and deepen their general understanding of the English vocabulary.

PS Sequential Art in Postcolonial Contexts (Proseminar)

This course introduces students to the analysis of sequential art as a form of expression which combines textual and visual language. Based on a discussion of a range of critical approaches to the study of graphic novels, comics and cartoons, we examine how these mediums can be used to engage with central concepts and debates in postcolonial studies. Our discussion will focus on aspects such as the representation of traumatic histories, experiences of (forced) migration, relationships of power and processes of racialization. Primary texts include Art Spiegelman's Maus, the graphic novel adaptation of Octavia Butler's Kindred, Persepolis by Marjane Satrapi, the journalistic comics The Unwanted and Madaya Mom, as well as a selection of Marvel's Black Panther comics. Students are expected to have read the following primary sources in preparation for the respective sessions: Art Spiegelman, The Complete Maus (Penguin, 2003 edition) Damian Duffy and John Jennings, Kindred (Abrams, 2016) Mar

Analyzing Variation (Übung)

Variability is one of the most fundamental properties of language. In this course, we will approach linguistic variation from the perspective of Variationist Sociolinguistics, which studies the way language varies according to external (=social) and internal (=linguistic) factors. After developing a basic understanding of variation, linguistic variables and variationist methods, students will work in small groups on a mini project over the course of the semester. The project will involve compilation of a sufficiently large dataset for analysis of a particular variable, circumscription of the variable context, coding of dependent and independent variables, quantitative analysis, and visual presentation of results. The last sessions will be dedicated to the discussion of the variables examined.

Basic Phonetics A (Übung)

This class offers an introduction to the principles of Phonetics and Phonology, including the articulatory basis and feature descriptions of especially the phonemes and allophones that occur in the major varieties of English. There will be a practical focus on both British (RP) and American (GA) standard pronunciations as well on phonological transcriptions both using IPA (an account of the organizational principles of the IPA will be provided as well) and, for students of the "Lehramt", the systems expected in the Bavarian state exams.

Basic Phonetics B (Übung)

Contemporary English Drama (Vorlesung)

Die Vorlesung wird sich der wichtigsten Vertreterinnen und Vertreter des Neuen Englischen Dramas annehmen, das seit dem Skandalerfolg von John Osbornes Look Back in Anger aus dem Jahre 1956 zu einem der wichtigsten, innovativsten und lebendigsten Strömungen dramatischer Weltliteratur avanciert ist. Es werden historische Aspekte des englischen Theatersystems diskutiert wie, zum Beispiel die Konzeption eines National Theatres. Darüber hinaus wird perspektivisch das englische Drama im 20. Jahrhundert nicht nur am viktorianischen Erbe, am Modernismus, am Versdrama und am Well-Made-Play gemessen, sondern auch zu dem zentralen pan-europäischen Entwicklungslinien des Dramas (episches Theater, absurdes Theater, Metadrama) in Beziehung gesetzt, zu denen es in einer kreativen Wechselbeziehung steht. Auf der einen Seite versuchen die DramatikerInnen, die Gegebenheiten und Probleme einer sich verändernden und sich weiter modernisierenden Gesellschaft wiedererkennbar zu reflektieren und diese nicht

Drama Analysis (Übung)

This course provides students with the basic skills needed for analysing drama. We will discuss and apply the most essential concepts of drama analysis, from ancient and early modern theories of tragedy and the distinction between absolute and epic drama to methods of figure characterization, the categories of time and space, and contemporary discussions concerning the relation between text and performance. We will work with two full-length plays (to be announced soon) and excerpts from various plays from different historical periods and of different genres. Both primary and secondary literature will be made available via Digicampus. Drama Analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory) and is offered once every year.

Dystopian Fiction (Übung)

Since the beginning of the 20th century, dystopian fiction appears to be everywhere. Its function, to serve as a warning of a potentially negative future, means the contents adapt to mirror contemporary problems as they can be observed in the real world. Therefore, it serves as a means to show social and political issues in a realm of fiction to help gain a deeper understanding of contemporary culture in a way that might even inspire action. For example, in current times certain events have inspired comparisons to the fictional dystopian world Gilead from The Handmaid's Tale.

Evidentiality (Übung)

During his presidency, Donald Trump has, on multiple occasions, discredited news networks and –papers, such as CNN, the Washington Post and the New York Times by using the term "Fake News" for reports that have been questioning and often debunking his claims. In times of these "Fake News" debates, society's awareness that truth is a relative construct has heightened immensely. But how can this awareness be expressed in language? How do we refer to our sources and how can we fact-check others? In recent years, evidentiality has emerged as a linguistic field and can help us understand how sources are marked and how our stance towards their verisimilitude is conveyed in discourse. This course aims at providing an insight into the classification and acquisition of sources as well as how they can be classified linguistically. To do this, we will look at different forms of discourse and analyze its source markers as well as look upon the different approaches in dealing with evidentiality tha

Examenskolloguium Amerikanistik

Das Kolloquium dient der Vorbereitung der Staatsexamensprüfungen im Bereich der amerikanischen Literaturwissenschaft im Fach Amerikanistik. Der Semesterplan richtet sich auch nach den Wünschen und Planungen der Teilnehmer, beinhaltet aber in jedem Fall folgende Themen: Überblick über das im schriftlichen Staatsexamen geforderte Hintergrundwissen; Form und Struktur von Prüfungsessays; gemeinsame Bearbeitung schriftlicher Examensaufgaben. N.B. Beim Examenskolloquium handelt es sich nicht um ein literaturgeschichtliches Repetitorium. Das Kolloquium wird im Block abgehalten, der Termin wird hier zeitnah verkündet.

Examenskolloquium Englische Literaturwissenschaft (Kolloquium)

Das Examenskolloquium bereitet Studierende auf das Lehramt-Staatsexamen im Fachgebiet Englische Literaturwissenschaft vor, indem Anregungen zur Prüfungsvorbereitung sowie Anleitungen zur gezielten, erfolgreichen Planung des Examens gegeben werden. Die Studierenden werden mit den Anforderungen des schriftlichen Staatsexamens der LPO I von 2008 im Fach Englisch/Literaturwissenschaft vertraut gemacht und erhalten Strategien für die Klausurvorbereitung. Dazu werden Beispiele für Klausuraufgaben diskutiert und wichtige historische Fakten und gattungstypische Fachbegriffe wiederholt. Teile des Kolloquiums werden als Blockveranstaltung gehalten. Die Zeiten werden zu Beginn des Semesters bzw. in dessen weiterem Verlauf rechtzeitig angekündigt.

Examenskolloquium/Directed Studies B.A., B.Ed., M.A., M.Ed., Zula/Promotionskolloquium NELK (Kolloquium) Blockveranstaltungen zur Staatsexamensvorbereitung Postcolonial Studies/Neue Englische Literaturen, Mentorat für Bachelor-/Zulassungsarbeiten sowie Masterarbeitsprojekte im Bereich NELK und Kolloquium für Promotionsprojekte. Eintragung nach Anmeldung per E-mail bzw. Sprechstunde.

Forms of Address in Context (Übung)

Forms of address are among the most fundamental linguistic means by which speakers construct and negotiate interpersonal relationships. Whether, for instance, English speakers use terms such as 'Sir', 'Mr Carmichael' or 'John' to address an interlocutor named John Carmichael provides valuable information about the speaker, the addressee, the relationship between the two as well as the situational context in which the interaction takes place. The choice of address in a particular context varies considerably across national boundaries as well as across social groups within the same country. This Übung will focus on the range of forms that speakers of English have (and used to have) at their disposal to address their interlocutors. More precisely, we are going to investigate – by means of representative case studies – in how far the speakers' address behaviour (a) has changed throughout the history of English, (b) varies across different varieties of English (e.g. AmE vs. BrE) and (c) is ... History of English (Vorlesung)

This lecture offers a comprehensive introduction to the history of English from its beginnings right up to the present time and considers possible relationships between linguistic changes and social changes. It discusses the peculiarities of Old English, Middle English, Early Modern English, Late Modern English and Modern English, focussing on their socio-historical backgrounds and textual traditions, and on the changing communicative needs of the speakers (and hearers) of English and Englishes throughout the centuries.

Morphology (Übung)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. -- This course offers a thorough introduction to basic phenomena and concepts of morphology (e.,g. inflexion, derivation, reduplication, compounding, productivity, etc.) and word formation (clippings, blends, acronyms, conversion, etc.). The following guiding questions will take centre stage in this process: Which structural rules & regularities inform word formation processes? Are words common only in certain contexts, are they used by certain social groups or people? How do cognitive concepts arise from linguistic forms and expressions; what does morphology and word word formation reveal about the way we think? How can we apply morphological phenomena (past tense –ed) to designate specific text types like descriptive, narrative or instructive texts? Note that this course is designed to enable st

Narrative Analysis (Übung)

This course aims to introduce central principles of narrative analysis and deepen students' knowledge of these categories. Key areas are: - Narrative situation (Who speaks? Who perceives?) - Strategies of rendering consciousness in narrative - Time and space in narrative - Unreliability The basic framework will be provided by Gérard Genette's structuralist model of narratology (which we will compare against Franz K. Stanzel's triadic model of narrative situations), but where appropriate other relevant narratological theories will be introduced. Besides reading and discussing the theoretical foundations of narrative analysis, there will be a focus on applying the analytical tools provided by narratology, which means students will get ample opportunities to practise their newly gained knowledge. The analytic framework this course seeks to trace is fundamental for a profound understanding of all narrative fiction and is therefore essential both with regard to writing term papers on prose ... Poetry Analysis (Übung)

Poetry analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory). This course is intended for all students of English and American Studies, who should have attended courses in all five of these areas before they register for their final exams. The course provides a comprehensive introduction to the key concepts of poetry analysis and its various critical approaches. For this purpose we will analyze a wide range of selected poems that comprise the major epochs of English literature. In order to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their respective historical and literary contexts.

Rethinking Humanism in Contemporary Cultural Theory (Übung)

Like philosophy or history, the study of languages, arts and cultures belongs to those branches of knowledge collectively called the 'humanities'. The term 'humanities' derives from the Renaissance tradition of learning and critical thinking known as 'humanism', but also, more broadly speaking, from 'humanism' as a focus on specifically human experiences, problems, meanings and potentials. What exactly is 'specifically human', however, is a question that has become increasingly controversial in recent decades. The assumption that the human being is the 'rational animal' has long since been put into perspective, and the idea that 'man is the measure of all things' may seem untenable in an age of advancing mechanization, globalization, and environmental degradation. Contemporary theorists disagree whether humanism is an ethically and culturally valuable attitude to the world that needs to be defended, or whether it is an outdated and dangerous point of view that should be overcome. Self-Conscious Horror in Media (Übung)

This seminar predominantly deals with horror videogames. Departing from theoretical groundwork in the creation of fear in film and videogames, we will develop a framework for talking about what instills fear in a player. After this introduction into the frightening mechanisms and conventions found in videogames, we will turn to their self-conscious elements and their function(s). These include but are not limited to artist-characters and the relation to their works of art, metaleptic structures blurring the boundaries between reality and game as well as the game's (illusion of) malfunctioning. The following games will be discussed in their entirety throughout the course: Silent Hill (PS1, 1999) Alan Wake (Xbox360/PC, 2010) Pony Island (PC, 2016) Layers of Fear (various, 2016) Doki Doki Literature Club (PC, 2017)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. -- In this course, students are invited to recapitulate and expand their knowledge in the field of syntactic analysis. Based on the

The Crisis of Modernism / Modernity as Crisis (Vorlesung)

This lecture course is designed in such a way as to include (hopefully lively) discussions. Its focus lies on American culture between World War I and World War II: an era which saw the birth of new technologies of production, representation, and destruction as well as far-ranging revolutions in the organization of knowledge. Sociology, ethnology, psychoanalysis, and other disciplines, emerged in the early 20th century as specific ways of theorizing modernity. Technological innovations like film exerted a profound influence on early twentieth-century artists and writers, and contributed to how people saw their own world and the worlds of others. And yet we should not limit modernity and the culture of modernism to a fixed, non-historical moment. Going against that trend, this lecture emphasizes the processual and relational aspects of American modernity and stresses the multifacetedness and contradictoriness of the phenomenon. Starting with a brief look at late nineteenth- and early tw

Ü Analyzing Sequential Art (Übung)

As cultural artefact, sequential art calls for a specific analysis, which depends directly on the specific medium or rather genre, such as graphic novel, comics, cartoon or manga. This course seeks to analyze all forms of sequential art based on different theoretical and methodical accesses. The focus is primarily on practical approaches and analyzing popular works including "Maus", "Amazing Spider-Man", "Walking Dead", "Watchmen" and "Sin City" as well as rather unknown ones such as "Akame ga kill" or "The Unwanted". After a short introduction of the respective method, we will practice our skills through sample analyses, in-class exercises, discussions and peer reviews of response paragraphs. Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

This course/Übung outlines some of the most relevant concepts for cultural analysis, including different notions of 'culture' itself. Drawing from a cultural studies framework and examples from current debates, we will analyze how questions of representation and power tie in with concepts and notions of 'identity', the 'nation', as well as 'race', 'class', 'gender' and 'ability' in the discursive field of culture. Examples and discussions from popular culture and cultural activism for social change complement our inquiry into the functions and effects of cultural representation.

Ü Theorizing the African Diaspora in Speculative Fiction and Popular Culture (Übung)

In this course we will examine different theories of diaspora in relation to speculative fiction and debates in popular culture. How can the concept be brought to bear on these contexts, how is it shifting, and where are its limits? For the M.A. module EAS-1854 this course is best combined with the seminar "From SciFi to the Speculative to the Supernatural."

Analyzing Variation (Übung)

Variability is one of the most fundamental properties of language. In this course, we will approach linguistic variation from the perspective of Variationist Sociolinguistics, which studies the way language varies according to external (=social) and internal (=linguistic) factors. After developing a basic understanding of variation, linguistic variables and variationist methods, students will work in small groups on a mini project over the course of the semester. The project will involve compilation of a sufficiently large dataset for analysis of a particular variable, circumscription of the variable context, coding of dependent and independent variables, quantitative analysis, and visual presentation of results. The last sessions will be dedicated to the discussion of the variables examined.

Basic Phonetics A (Übung)

Es werden historische Aspekte des englischen Theatersystems diskutiert wie, zum Beispiel die Konzeption eines National Theatres. Darüber hinaus wird perspektivisch das englische Drama im 20. Contemporary English Drama (Vorlesung)

Die Vorlesung wird sich der wichtigsten Vertreterinnen und Vertreter des Neuen Englischen Dramas annehmen, das seit dem Skandalerfolg von John Osbornes Look Back in Anger aus dem Jahre 1956 zu einem der wichtigsten, innovativsten und lebendigsten Strömungen dramatischer Weltliteratur avanciert ist. Es werden historische Aspekte des englischen Theatersystems diskutiert wie, zum Beispiel die Konzeption eines National Theatres. Darüber hinaus wird perspektivisch das englische Drama im 20. Jahrhundert nicht nur am viktorianischen Erbe, am Modernismus, am Versdrama und am Well-Made-Play gemessen, sondern auch zu dem zentralen pan-europäischen Entwicklungslinien des Dramas (episches Theater, absurdes Theater, Metadrama) in Beziehung gesetzt, zu denen es in einer kreativen Wechselbeziehung steht. Auf der einen Seite versuchen die DramatikerInnen, die Gegebenheiten und Probleme einer sich verändernden und sich weiter modernisierenden Gesellschaft wiedererkennbar zu reflektieren und diese nicht

Drama Analysis (Übung)

This course provides students with the basic skills needed for analysing drama. We will discuss and apply the most essential concepts of drama analysis, from ancient and early modern theories of tragedy and the distinction between absolute and epic drama to methods of figure characterization, the categories of time and space, and contemporary discussions concerning the relation between text and performance. We will work with two full-length plays (to be announced soon) and excerpts from various plays from different historical periods and of different genres. Both primary and secondary literature will be made available via Digicampus. Drama Analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory) and is offered once every year.

Dystopian Fiction (Übung)

Since the beginning of the 20th century, dystopian fiction appears to be everywhere. Its function, to serve as a warning of a potentially negative future, means the contents adapt to mirror contemporary problems as they can be observed in the real world. Therefore, it serves as a means to show social and political issues in a realm of fiction to help gain a deeper understanding of contemporary culture in a way that might even inspire action. For example, in current times certain events have inspired comparisons to the fictional dystopian world Gilead from The Handmaid's Tale.

Evidentiality (Übung)

During his presidency, Donald Trump has, on multiple occasions, discredited news networks and –papers, such as CNN, the Washington Post and the New York Times by using the term "Fake News" for reports that have been questioning and often debunking his claims. In times of these "Fake News" debates, society's awareness that truth is a relative construct has heightened immensely. But how can this awareness be expressed in language? How do we refer to our sources and how can we fact-check others? In recent years, evidentiality has emerged as a linguistic field and can help us understand how sources are marked and how our stance towards their verisimilitude is conveyed in discourse. This course aims at providing an insight into the classification and acquisition of sources as well as how they can be classified linguistically. To do this, we will look at different forms of discourse and analyze its source markers as well as look upon the different approaches in dealing with evidentiality tha

Forms of Address in Context (Übung)

Forms of address are among the most fundamental linguistic means by which speakers construct and negotiate interpersonal relationships. Whether, for instance, English speakers use terms such as 'Sir', 'Mr Carmichael' or 'John' to address an interlocutor named John Carmichael provides valuable information about the speaker, the addressee, the relationship between the two as well as the situational context in which the interaction takes place. The choice of address in a particular context varies considerably across national boundaries as well as across social groups within the same country. This Übung will focus on the range of forms that speakers of English have (and used to have) at their disposal to address their interlocutors. More precisely, we are going to investigate – by means of representative case studies – in how far the speakers' address behaviour (a) has changed throughout the history of English, (b) varies across different varieties of English (e.g. AmE vs. BrE) and (c) is ... History of English (Vorlesung)

This lecture offers a comprehensive introduction to the history of English from its beginnings right up to the present time and considers possible relationships between linguistic changes and social changes. It discusses the peculiarities of Old English, Middle English, Early Modern English, Late Modern English and Modern English, focussing on their socio-historical backgrounds and textual traditions, and on the changing communicative needs of the speakers (and hearers) of English and Englishes throughout the centuries.

Morphology (Übung)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. -- This course offers a thorough introduction to basic phenomena and concepts of morphology (e.,g. inflexion, derivation, reduplication, compounding, productivity, etc.) and word formation (clippings, blends, acronyms, conversion, etc.). The following guiding questions will take centre stage in this process: Which structural rules & regularities inform word formation processes? Are words common only in certain contexts, are they used by certain social groups or people? How do cognitive concepts arise from linguistic forms and expressions; what does morphology and word word formation reveal about the way we think? How can we apply morphological phenomena (past tense –ed) to designate specific text types like descriptive, narrative or instructive texts? Note that this course is designed to enable st

Narrative Analysis (Übung)

This course aims to introduce central principles of narrative analysis and deepen students' knowledge of these categories. Key areas are: - Narrative situation (Who speaks? Who perceives?) - Strategies of rendering consciousness in narrative - Time and space in narrative - Unreliability The basic framework will be provided by Gérard Genette's structuralist model of narratology (which we will compare against Franz K. Stanzel's triadic model of narrative situations), but where appropriate other relevant narratological theories will be introduced. Besides reading and discussing the theoretical foundations of narrative analysis, there will be a focus on applying the analytical tools provided by narratology, which means students will get ample opportunities to practise their newly gained knowledge. The analytic framework this course seeks to trace is fundamental for a profound understanding of all narrative fiction and is therefore essential both with regard to writing term papers on prose ... Poetry Analysis (Übung)

Poetry analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory). This course is intended for all students of English and American Studies, who should have attended courses in all five of these areas before they register for their final exams. The course provides a comprehensive introduction to the key concepts of poetry analysis and its various critical approaches. For this purpose we will analyze a wide range of selected poems that comprise the major epochs of English literature. In order to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their respective historical and literary contexts.

Rethinking Humanism in Contemporary Cultural Theory (Übung)

Like philosophy or history, the study of languages, arts and cultures belongs to those branches of knowledge collectively called the 'humanities'. The term 'humanities' derives from the Renaissance tradition of learning and critical thinking known as 'humanism', but also, more broadly speaking, from 'humanism' as a focus on specifically human experiences, problems, meanings and potentials. What exactly is 'specifically human', however, is a question that has become increasingly controversial in recent decades. The assumption that the human being is the 'rational animal' has long since been put into perspective, and the idea that 'man is the measure of all things' may seem untenable in an age of advancing mechanization, globalization, and environmental degradation. Contemporary theorists disagree whether humanism is an ethically and culturally valuable attitude to the world that needs to be defended, or whether it is an outdated and dangerous point of view that should be overcome. Self-Conscious Horror in Media (Übung)

This seminar predominantly deals with horror videogames. Departing from theoretical groundwork in the creation of fear in film and videogames, we will develop a framework for talking about what instills fear in a player. After this introduction into the frightening mechanisms and conventions found in videogames, we will turn to their self-conscious elements and their function(s). These include but are not limited to artist-characters and the relation to their works of art, metaleptic structures blurring the boundaries between reality and game as well as the game's (illusion of) malfunctioning. The following games will be discussed in their entirety throughout the course: Silent Hill (PS1, 1999) Alan Wake (Xbox360/PC, 2010) Pony Island (PC, 2016) Layers of Fear (various, 2016) Doki Doki Literature Club (PC, 2017)

Die Exkursion findet Ende September 2018 statt und beinhaltet u.a. einen Besuch beim Dublin Theatre Festival und eine Fahrt an die Westküste. InteressentInnen tragen sich bitte unverbindlich in diese Veranstaltung ein und werden dann per Mail über Vorbesprechungen informiert. ACHTUNG: Diese Exkursion ist bereits ausgebucht!

Syntactic Structures (Übung)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. -- In this course, students are invited to recapitulate and expand their knowledge in the field of syntactic analysis. Based on the Comprehensive Grammar of the English Language (CGEL; Quirk et al.), a systematic overview of the elementary categories and concepts (formal and functional) of English syntax will be provided and students will be encouraged to practice their skills in various exercises, including the hands-on analyses of authentic English sentences.

The Crisis of Modernism / Modernity as Crisis (Vorlesung)

This lecture course is designed in such a way as to include (hopefully lively) discussions. Its focus lies on American culture between World War I and World War II: an era which saw the birth of new technologies of production, representation, and destruction as well as far-ranging revolutions in the organization of knowledge. Sociology, ethnology, psychoanalysis, and other disciplines, emerged in the early 20th century as specific ways of theorizing modernity. Technological innovations like film exerted a profound influence on early twentieth-century artists and writers, and contributed to how people saw their own world and the worlds of others. And yet we should not limit modernity and the culture of modernism to a fixed, non-historical moment. Going against that trend, this lecture emphasizes the processual and relational aspects of American modernity and stresses the multifacetedness and contradictoriness of the phenomenon. Starting with a brief look at late nineteenth- and early tw

Ü Analyzing Sequential Art (Übung)

As cultural artefact, sequential art calls for a specific analysis, which depends directly on the specific medium or rather genre, such as graphic novel, comics, cartoon or manga. This course seeks to analyze all forms of sequential art based on different theoretical and methodical accesses. The focus is primarily on practical approaches and analyzing popular works including "Maus", "Amazing Spider-Man", "Walking Dead", "Watchmen" and "Sin City" as well as rather unknown ones such as "Akame ga kill" or "The Unwanted". After a short introduction of the respective method, we will practice our skills through sample analyses, in-class exercises, discussions and peer reviews of response paragraphs. Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

This course/Übung outlines some of the most relevant concepts for cultural analysis, including different notions of 'culture' itself. Drawing from a cultural studies framework and examples from current debates, we will analyze how questions of representation and power tie in with concepts and notions of 'identity', the 'nation', as well as 'race', 'class', 'gender' and 'ability' in the discursive field of culture. Examples and discussions from popular culture and cultural activism for social change complement our inquiry into the functions and effects of cultural representation.

Ü Theorizing the African Diaspora in Speculative Fiction and Popular Culture (Übung)

In this course we will examine different theories of diaspora in relation to speculative fiction and debates in popular culture. How can the concept be brought to bear on these contexts, how is it shifting, and where are its limits? For the M.A. module EAS-1854 this course is best combined with the seminar "From SciFi to the Speculative to the Supernatural."

Analyzing Variation (Übung)

Variability is one of the most fundamental properties of language. In this course, we will approach linguistic variation from the perspective of Variationist Sociolinguistics, which studies the way language varies according to external (=social) and internal (=linguistic) factors. After developing a basic understanding of variation, linguistic variables and variationist methods, students will work in small groups on a mini project over the course of the semester. The project will involve compilation of a sufficiently large dataset for analysis of a particular variable, circumscription of the variable context, coding of dependent and independent variables, quantitative analysis, and visual presentation of results. The last sessions will be dedicated to the discussion of the variables examined.

We will work with two full-length plays (to be announced soon) and excerpts from various plays from different historical periods and of different genres. Both primary and secondary literature will be made available via Digicampus. Drama Analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory) and is offered once every year.

Dystopian Fiction (Übung)

Since the beginning of the 20th century, dystopian fiction appears to be everywhere. Its function, to serve as a warning of a potentially negative future, means the contents adapt to mirror contemporary problems as they can be observed in the real world. Therefore, it serves as a means to show social and political issues in a realm of fiction to help gain a deeper understanding of contemporary culture in a way that might even inspire action. For example, in current times certain events have inspired comparisons to the fictional dystopian world Gilead from The Handmaid's Tale.

Evidentiality (Übung)

During his presidency, Donald Trump has, on multiple occasions, discredited news networks and –papers, such as CNN, the Washington Post and the New York Times by using the term "Fake News" for reports that have been questioning and often debunking his claims. In times of these "Fake News" debates, society's awareness that truth is a relative construct has heightened immensely. But how can this awareness be expressed in language? How do we refer to our sources and how can we fact-check others? In recent years, evidentiality has emerged as a linguistic field and can help us understand how sources are marked and how our stance towards their verisimilitude is conveyed in discourse. This course aims at providing an insight into the classification and acquisition of sources as well as how they can be classified linguistically. To do this, we will look at different forms of discourse and analyze its source markers as well as look upon the different approaches in dealing with evidentiality tha

Forms of Address in Context (Übung)

Forms of address are among the most fundamental linguistic means by which speakers construct and negotiate interpersonal relationships. Whether, for instance, English speakers use terms such as 'Sir', 'Mr Carmichael' or 'John' to address an interlocutor named John Carmichael provides valuable information about the speaker, the addressee, the relationship between the two as well as the situational context in which the interaction takes place. The choice of address in a particular context varies considerably across national boundaries as well as across social groups within the same country. This Übung will focus on the range of forms that speakers of English have (and used to have) at their disposal to address their interlocutors. More precisely, we are going to investigate – by means of representative case studies – in how far the speakers' address behaviour (a) has changed throughout the history of English, (b) varies across different varieties of English (e.g. AmE vs. BrE) and (c) is ... History of English (Vorlesung)

This lecture offers a comprehensive introduction to the history of English from its beginnings right up to the present time and considers possible relationships between linguistic changes and social changes. It discusses the peculiarities of Old English, Middle English, Early Modern English, Late Modern English and Modern English, focussing on their socio-historical backgrounds and textual traditions, and on the changing communicative needs of the speakers (and hearers) of English and Englishes throughout the centuries.

Morphology (Übung)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. -- This course offers a thorough introduction to basic phenomena and concepts of morphology (e.,g. inflexion, derivation, reduplication, compounding, productivity, etc.) and word formation (clippings, blends, acronyms, conversion, etc.). The following guiding questions will take centre stage in this process: Which structural rules & regularities inform word formation processes? Are words common only in certain contexts, are they used by certain social groups or people? How do cognitive concepts arise from linguistic forms and expressions; what does morphology and word word formation reveal about the way we think? How can we apply morphological phenomena (past tense –ed) to designate specific text types like descriptive, narrative or instructive texts? Note that this course is designed to enable st

Narrative Analysis (Übung)

This course aims to introduce central principles of narrative analysis and deepen students' knowledge of these categories. Key areas are: - Narrative situation (Who speaks? Who perceives?) - Strategies of rendering consciousness in narrative - Time and space in narrative - Unreliability The basic framework will be provided by Gérard Genette's structuralist model of narratology (which we will compare against Franz K. Stanzel's triadic model of narrative situations), but where appropriate other relevant narratological theories will be introduced. Besides reading and discussing the theoretical foundations of narrative analysis, there will be a focus on applying the analytical tools provided by narratology, which means students will get ample opportunities to practise their newly gained knowledge. The analytic framework this course seeks to trace is fundamental for a profound understanding of all narrative fiction and is therefore essential both with regard to writing term papers on prose ... Poetry Analysis (Übung)

Poetry analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory). This course is intended for all students of English and American Studies, who should have attended courses in all five of these areas before they register for their final exams. The course provides a comprehensive introduction to the key concepts of poetry analysis and its various critical approaches. For this purpose we will analyze a wide range of selected poems that comprise the major epochs of English literature. In order to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their respective historical and literary contexts.

Rethinking Humanism in Contemporary Cultural Theory (Übung)

Like philosophy or history, the study of languages, arts and cultures belongs to those branches of knowledge collectively called the 'humanities'. The term 'humanities' derives from the Renaissance tradition of learning and critical thinking known as 'humanism', but also, more broadly speaking, from 'humanism' as a focus on specifically human experiences, problems, meanings and potentials. What exactly is 'specifically human', however, is a question that has become increasingly controversial in recent decades. The assumption that the human being is the 'rational animal' has long since been put into perspective, and the idea that 'man is the measure of all things' may seem untenable in an age of advancing mechanization, globalization, and environmental degradation. Contemporary theorists disagree whether humanism is an ethically and culturally valuable attitude to the world that needs to be defended, or whether it is an outdated and dangerous point of view that should be overcome. Self-Conscious Horror in Media (Übung)

This seminar predominantly deals with horror videogames. Departing from theoretical groundwork in the creation of fear in film and videogames, we will develop a framework for talking about what instills fear in a player. After this introduction into the frightening mechanisms and conventions found in videogames, we will turn to their self-conscious elements and their function(s). These include but are not limited to artist-characters and the relation to their works of art, metaleptic structures blurring the boundaries between reality and game as well as the game's (illusion of) malfunctioning. The following games will be discussed in their entirety throughout the course: Silent Hill (PS1, 1999) Alan Wake (Xbox360/PC, 2010) Pony Island (PC, 2016) Layers of Fear (various, 2016) Doki Doki Literature Club (PC, 2017)

Study Trip to Ireland 2018 (Übung)

Die Exkursion findet Ende September 2018 statt und beinhaltet u.a. einen Besuch beim Dublin Theatre Festival und eine Fahrt an die Westküste. InteressentInnen tragen sich bitte unverbindlich in diese Veranstaltung ein und werden dann per Mail über Vorbesprechungen informiert. ACHTUNG: Diese Exkursion ist bereits ausgebucht!

Syntactic Structures (Übung)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. -- In this course, students are invited to recapitulate and expand their knowledge in the field of syntactic analysis. Based on the Comprehensive Grammar of the English Language (CGEL; Quirk et al.), a systematic overview of the elementary categories and concepts (formal and functional) of English syntax will be provided and students will be encouraged to practice their skills in various exercises, including the hands-on analyses of authentic English sentences.

The Crisis of Modernism / Modernity as Crisis (Vorlesung)

This lecture course is designed in such a way as to include (hopefully lively) discussions. Its focus lies on American culture between World War I and World War II: an era which saw the birth of new technologies of production, representation, and destruction as well as far-ranging revolutions in the organization of knowledge. Sociology, ethnology, psychoanalysis, and other disciplines, emerged in the early 20th century as specific ways of theorizing modernity. Technological innovations like film exerted a profound influence on early twentieth-century artists and writers, and contributed to how people saw their own world and the worlds of others. And yet we should not limit modernity and the culture of modernism to a fixed, non-historical moment. Going against that trend, this lecture emphasizes the processual and relational aspects of American modernity and stresses the multifacetedness and contradictoriness of the phenomenon. Starting with a brief look at late nineteenth- and early tw

Ü Analyzing Sequential Art (Übung)

As cultural artefact, sequential art calls for a specific analysis, which depends directly on the specific medium or rather genre, such as graphic novel, comics, cartoon or manga. This course seeks to analyze all forms of sequential art based on different theoretical and methodical accesses. The focus is primarily on practical approaches and analyzing popular works including "Maus", "Amazing Spider-Man", "Walking Dead", "Watchmen" and "Sin City" as well as rather unknown ones such as "Akame ga kill" or "The Unwanted". After a short introduction of the respective method, we will practice our skills through sample analyses, in-class exercises, discussions and peer reviews of response paragraphs. For students taking the Übung "Analyzing Sequential Art": The corresponding Proseminar is "Sequential Art in Postcolonial Contexts (Johanna Pundt, Mi. 15:45 - 17:15).

Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

This course/Übung outlines some of the most relevant concepts for cultural analysis, including different notions of 'culture' itself. Drawing from a cultural studies framework and examples from current debates, we will analyze how questions of representation and power tie in with concepts and notions of 'identity', the 'nation', as well as 'race', 'class', 'gender' and 'ability' in the discursive field of culture. Examples and discussions from popular culture and cultural activism for social change complement our inquiry into the functions and effects of cultural representation.

Dialectology (Seminar)

This seminar consists of a theory-based dialectological part and a descriptive part. First, we will look at the importance of mechanisms and causes of language change, which lead to the formation of new dialects and eventually languages (geographical and sociological aspects are considered especially). The second part will then provide an overview of dialectal variation in the English-speaking world, covering the British Isles, North America and the southern hemisphere (Australia, New Zealand, South Africa).

Health, Medicine, and American Literature Since the Civil War (Hauptseminar)

This seminar will be taught by guest lecturer Prof. Philip Barrish of the University of Texas. If questions arise beforehand, please contact the secretary's office: sekretariat.amerikanistik@philhist.uni-augsburg.de How does literature relate to illness, health, and healing? The course primarily focuses on representations of medicine, doctors, and the illness experience in selected literary works from the U.S. and the U.K. The first week, however, will be devoted to concepts and methods in the interdisciplinary field of medical humanities, particularly as practiced in U.S. medical schools. Issues of interest will include, for example, the roles played by narrative, empathy, and the imagination in medical education and practice. These concepts will help provide a framework for our discussions of the literary works assigned over the following three weeks. James Joyce and the Modernist Novel (Hauptseminar)

James Joyce, who was born in Dublin in 1882 and who died in Zurich in 1941, is certainly the most innovative and path-breaking novelist of the twentieth century worldwide. Joyce's fiction and his experimental prose are epitomes of the modernist movement and a new, fragmented, and psychologically modernist, that is, inward and phenomenological view of life. Stream-of-consciousness techniques, which had their origin in late-19th century movements such as naturalism and literary impressionism, were brought to perfection in Joyce's works. The seminar will elaborate on major characteristics of the modernist and avantgarde movements in the 20th century. The seminar will, then, turn to Joyce's fiction in a chronological order: In this semester, we shall start with the still thoroughly naturalist prose in his collection of short storiesn Dubliners and then move to his famous (autobiographical) novel A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man. Studying the aesthetics of the latter will pave the wa

Language and Gender (Seminar)

This is a compact seminar (Blockseminar) which takes place on three different days. Please make sure you can attend all three continous sessions. Within media, education and everyday life, questions of gender have gained more and more importance during the last few years. Not only, but also movements like the recent #metoo campaign or political developments towards populist gender criticism have drawn the topic into the public eye. But how can gender be approached linguistically? Do men and women really talk differently? Does it make a difference if men and women are addressed differently and – if so – what effects can be expected by gender neutral language? Which conclusions can be drawn from a queer or intercultural perspective? In this course, we will try to answer these – and other – questions, starting off with a look at general theories of gender and locating gender linguistics within the field of humanities / social sciences. We will touch upon the subject within the frame of di

Language and Violence (Seminar)

Language is a powerful tool that can be used to hurt and harass. Speech can cause pain. Violence can be done not only by physical but also by symbolic action. As social actors we exploit the possibilities of language to this end, thus discriminating, manipulating, stigmatizing others. In this seminar, we will examine the language of ethnic, sexual, religious and other kinds of violence as exercised in various types of text (e.g., in Rap Music lyrics, hate talk shows, blogs, newspaper reports and comments, cartoons etc.).

Narratives of Mobility and Immobility: Diaspora, Race, and Social Exclusion (Hauptseminar)

American culture is intrinsically tied to notions of mobility: from the early pilgrims, explorers, and travelers to the flows of immigrants that have reached American shores, the US emerges as a country on the move. Here, more than elsewhere, perhaps, the idea of being "on the road," and of ever new encounters, seems vital to the country's self-perception as exceptionally dynamic, progressive, and in the making. Yet it is not only a story about criss-crossing the continent (and beyond) but also about moving upward, crossing class, racial, and gender lines, to succeed and find happiness in a land that rewards those who have courage. But this is only half the story: Ever since Melville's "Bartleby the Scrivener" are we acquainted with a group of static heroes that either refuse to move, or are pushed around, or spend their lives in the paralyzing grip of society's social, racial, and gendered contract. We may ask ourselves whether the Filippino-American author Carlos Bulosan (America is ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Neurolinguistics (Seminar)

Neurolinguistics aims to describe the relationship between the brain and linguistic function. You will be introduced to different concepts that aim to describe this relationship. A major part of the seminar will be covered by the study of language and speech disorders like, for example, aphasias (relating to damage in specific brain areas) and dysarthrias (relating to nerve damage), as these production impairments demonstrate the connection between linguistic abilities and brain anatomy. We will also look at agnosias as disorders of language reception and perception. In order to examine the exact causes for these disorders you will also be given an overview of modern methods of brain imaging.

On Context and Common Ground (Hauptseminar)

Two girls walk up to the library, both see a blue bicycle in front of it.] A: "Maybe we should grab a cup of coffee first before going in..." B: "Definitely." The notion of context is an integral part of pragmatic analyses, which more often than not deal with the negotiation of meaning between interlocutors engaged in authentic conversations. In linguistics, the seemingly unlimited potential for the disambiguation of utterances is commonly attributed to context. However, to validate this claim, we need to find answers to the following questions: What is context? In other words: What are the components that interlocutors draw on to make their contributions mutually understandable? Does everything in the interlocutors' physical surroundings automatically form part of the context? If there is a line between context and environment, where do we draw it? Then again, how is it possible that we can afford to take parts of conceptual and attitudinal knowledge in our interlocutors for granted? Th

Register Variation in English (Seminar)

In different situations, we use language for different communicative purposes, employing different structural patterns. The study of register variation focuses on how language varies systematically according to situation of use. Linguistic features characteristic of conversation (e.g. discourse particles, second person pronouns and contractions, as in "Well, you're great!"), for instance, may be rare in research papers and official documents but found in registers such as narrative fiction and SMS text messages. In this course, you will learn to describe texts (both spoken and written) from different registers by studying their lexico-grammatical patterns and situational contexts. For this, we will use a foundational tool called multi-dimensional analysis. You will be introduced to the tool via hands-on practice and eventually analyze text(s) of your own choice. Dialectology (Seminar)

This seminar consists of a theory-based dialectological part and a descriptive part. First, we will look at the importance of mechanisms and causes of language change, which lead to the formation of new dialects and eventually languages (geographical and sociological aspects are considered especially). The second part will then provide an overview of dialectal variation in the English-speaking world, covering the British Isles, North America and the southern hemisphere (Australia, New Zealand, South Africa).

Health, Medicine, and American Literature Since the Civil War (Hauptseminar)

This seminar will be taught by guest lecturer Prof. Philip Barrish of the University of Texas. If questions arise beforehand, please contact the secretary's office: sekretariat.amerikanistik@philhist.uni-augsburg.de How does literature relate to illness, health, and healing? The course primarily focuses on representations of medicine, doctors, and the illness experience in selected literary works from the U.S. and the U.K. The first week, however, will be devoted to concepts and methods in the interdisciplinary field of medical humanities, particularly as practiced in U.S. medical schools. Issues of interest will include, for example, the roles played by narrative, empathy, and the imagination in medical education and practice. These concepts will help provide a framework for our discussions of the literary works assigned over the following three weeks. Please note that student discussion will be an important part of the course. Students should arrive in class each day having completed ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

James Joyce and the Modernist Novel (Hauptseminar)

James Joyce, who was born in Dublin in 1882 and who died in Zurich in 1941, is certainly the most innovative and path-breaking novelist of the twentieth century worldwide. Joyce's fiction and his experimental prose are epitomes of the modernist movement and a new, fragmented, and psychologically modernist, that is, inward and phenomenological view of life. Stream-of-consciousness techniques, which had their origin in late-19th century movements such as naturalism and literary impressionism, were brought to perfection in Joyce's works. The seminar will elaborate on major characteristics of the modernist and avantgarde movements in the 20th century. The seminar will, then, turn to Joyce's fiction in a chronological order: In this semester, we shall start with the still thoroughly naturalist prose in his collection of short storiesn Dubliners and then move to his famous (autobiographical) novel A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man. Studying the aesthetics of the latter will pave the wa

Language and Gender (Seminar)

This is a compact seminar (Blockseminar) which takes place on three different days. Please make sure you can attend all three continous sessions. Within media, education and everyday life, questions of gender have gained more and more importance during the last few years. Not only, but also movements like the recent #metoo campaign or political developments towards populist gender criticism have drawn the topic into the public eye. But how can gender be approached linguistically? Do men and women really talk differently? Does it make a difference if men and women are addressed differently and – if so – what effects can be expected by gender neutral language? Which conclusions can be drawn from a queer or intercultural perspective? In this course, we will try to answer these – and other – questions, starting off with a look at general theories of gender and locating gender linguistics within the field of humanities / social sciences. We will touch upon the subject within the frame of di

Language and Violence (Seminar)

Language is a powerful tool that can be used to hurt and harass. Speech can cause pain. Violence can be done not only by physical but also by symbolic action. As social actors we exploit the possibilities of language to this end, thus discriminating, manipulating, stigmatizing others. In this seminar, we will examine the language of ethnic, sexual, religious and other kinds of violence as exercised in various types of text (e.g., in Rap Music lyrics, hate talk shows, blogs, newspaper reports and comments, cartoons etc.).

Narratives of Mobility and Immobility: Diaspora, Race, and Social Exclusion (Hauptseminar)

American culture is intrinsically tied to notions of mobility: from the early pilgrims, explorers, and travelers to the flows of immigrants that have reached American shores, the US emerges as a country on the move. Here, more than elsewhere, perhaps, the idea of being "on the road," and of ever new encounters, seems vital to the country's self-perception as exceptionally dynamic, progressive, and in the making. Yet it is not only a story about criss-crossing the continent (and beyond) but also about moving upward, crossing class, racial, and gender lines, to succeed and find happiness in a land that rewards those who have courage. But this is only half the story: Ever since Melville's "Bartleby the Scrivener" are we acquainted with a group of static heroes that either refuse to move, or are pushed around, or spend their lives in the paralyzing grip of society's social, racial, and gendered contract. We may ask ourselves whether the Filippino-American author Carlos Bulosan (America is ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Neurolinguistics (Seminar)

Neurolinguistics aims to describe the relationship between the brain and linguistic function. You will be introduced to different concepts that aim to describe this relationship. A major part of the seminar will be covered by the study of language and speech disorders like, for example, aphasias (relating to damage in specific brain areas) and dysarthrias (relating to nerve damage), as these production impairments demonstrate the connection between linguistic abilities and brain anatomy. We will also look at agnosias as disorders of language reception and perception. In order to examine the exact causes for these disorders you will also be given an overview of modern methods of brain imaging.

On Context and Common Ground (Hauptseminar)

Two girls walk up to the library, both see a blue bicycle in front of it.] A: "Maybe we should grab a cup of coffee first before going in..." B: "Definitely." The notion of context is an integral part of pragmatic analyses, which more often than not deal with the negotiation of meaning between interlocutors engaged in authentic conversations. In linguistics, the seemingly unlimited potential for the disambiguation of utterances is commonly attributed to context. However, to validate this claim, we need to find answers to the following questions: What is context? In other words: What are the components that interlocutors draw on to make their contributions mutually understandable? Does everything in the interlocutors' physical surroundings automatically form part of the context? If there is a line between context and environment, where do we draw it? Then again, how is it possible that we can afford to take parts of conceptual and attitudinal knowledge in our interlocutors for granted? Th

Register Variation in English (Seminar)

In different situations, we use language for different communicative purposes, employing different structural patterns. The study of register variation focuses on how language varies systematically according to situation of use. Linguistic features characteristic of conversation (e.g. discourse particles, second person pronouns and contractions, as in "Well, you're great!"), for instance, may be rare in research papers and official documents but found in registers such as narrative fiction and SMS text messages. In this course, you will learn to describe texts (both spoken and written) from different registers by studying their lexico-grammatical patterns and situational contexts. For this, we will use a foundational tool called multi-dimensional analysis. You will be introduced to the tool via hands-on practice and eventually analyze text(s) of your own choice.
