Sie können mit fachdidaktischen Grundlagentexten selbstständig umgehen und wissen diese im Rahmen der Vor- bzw. Nachbereitung von Lehrveranstaltungen gewinnbringend zu nutzen. Sozial/personal: Die Studierenden lernen grundlegende Formen wissenschaftlicher Kommunikation kennen. Sie erfassen die Differenz zwischen ihren alltagsweltlichen (Schul-)Vorerfahrungen und einer wissenschaftlichen Objektkonstitution. Im ersten Kontakt mit dem Fachbereich werden eigene wissenschaftliche Positionen begründet und fachliche Neugier entwickelt.

A Practical Approach to Teaching English at Gymnasium (Proseminar)

In this workshop I would like to provide you with tools that enable you to become a competent, confident and creative teacher. My hands-on approach will combine the theory of didactics with practical suggestions for teaching grammar and vocabulary, and getting learners to talk and write. Beyond that, you will be introduced to ways of building rapport and maintaining a work-life balance inside and outside of the classroom.

Games in the Foreign Language Classroom (Proseminar)

Methods of Teaching English in Elementary School (Proseminar)

Learning English at elementary school should be a unit of "head, heart and hand". This means cognitive, emotional and practical skills should be stimulated and used during the lesson in various activities. How can teachers have pupils listen to and talk in the foreign language with all their senses and without any shyness. Many concepts and various different approaches were discussed since the beginning of teaching English to younger learners. This seminar should introduce typical methods and techniques of teaching a foreign language in elementary school. Together we will develop an ABC with necessary methods and techniques for the elementary school.

Teaching Cultural Studies: Australia (Proseminar)

The cultural component of foreign language acquisition has received greater emphasis again since the end-1990s – not only in schools, but also in adult education. The acquisition of a practical understanding of the target culture and society, including a knowledge of relevant historical, geographical and political issues, has thus become an important element in teacher training programs. This Proseminar offers an in-depth insight into Australia and how to teach cultural studies in the classroom.

Teaching and Assessing Orality (Proseminar)

As one of the four (respectively five) skills in FLE, oral production has gained more and more importance in Bavarian classrooms over the last years - current syllabi stress the fact that oral communication is just as important as its written counterpart. Thus, in Bavaria, oral exams and oral assessment have become a compulsory for all learners of English – just as much as their daily routine within the FLE classroom is often much based on oral exchange rather than a written one. Hence, we shall not only see what importance is attached to orality, but also how speaking (and listening!) skills can be developed systematically in order to gain communicative competence. Moreover, we will have a look at modes of assessing oral performance and different types of exams.

Lit 21 (Hauptseminar) The title of our course serves as an abbreviation of literature in the 21st century. In the last 18 years, a considerable number of new literary genres has emerged. That is why we will attempt to explore the potential of Lit 21 for teaching EFL classes. We will particularly draw our attention to genres like Crunch Lit, Apocalyptic Fiction, New Gothic, Cosmopolitan Fiction, Doodle Fiction, Manga, Digi Fiction, Text-Talk Fiction and others. As we will analyze, discuss and didactically evaluate various pieces of literature, students are expected to read a lot. In addition, we will include a guest lesson by an experienced teacher as well as the 4th TEFL Day ("Tag der Englischdidaktik").

Teaching House of Cards in the Upper Secondary Level (Hauptseminar)

Audio-visual media still lead a Cinderella existence when it comes to teaching English as a foreign language. Nevertheless, films and series are very popular with pupils and a lot of competences can be promoted – teachers just need to make sure that films are not consumed passively. In this class, we will draw our attention to film-based language learning (FBLL) in the upper secondary level. We will have a closer look at short (music videos), medium (series) and long formats and possible modes of presentation. The foundation of FBLL in curricula, educational standards and CEFR will also play an important role. Finally, the American drama series House of Cards will serve to illustrate how much students can benefit from FBLL.

Texts as Source, Product and Tool in TEFL (Hauptseminar)

"Texts" are a central tool when it comes to teaching a secondary language. Thus it only seems appropriate to examine these "tools" a bit further. In the course of this seminar, future teachers of English shall be given the opportunity to ponder on the wide definition of the term "text" within the respective syllabi of their school type. Furthermore, the different uses of these shall be examined when it comes to teaching language skills and competences; what is more, students will come to see how a useful and meaningful progression in the choice of text formats should help learners to enhance those skills / competences and how they can be made to develop an independent grasp of the range and of the uses of "texts". Lastly, each student is asked to come up with a lesson project in which "texts" play a vital role. This project is going to be presented to their peers and commented on within a short term paper.

'The Way Teachers Talk': Developing Classroom Discourse Competence (Hauptseminar)

Research has shown that the way EFL teachers talk to and with their students in class has an impact on learners' language acquisition process and learning outcome. Using this correlation as a general starting point in this course, we will explore, discuss, analyze, and reflect upon various ways of optimizing classroom communication and making teacher talk more effective for the benefit of L2 learners. Course participants will gain a deeper understanding of the relationship between lesson content, teacher talk, classroom interaction, and foreign language learning. They will also acquire the tools which enable them to analyze and reflect on processes of spoken classroom discourse. Among other things, we will focus on selected aspects of classroom discourse to explore in which ways teacher talk can either promote or hinder classroom interaction and language learning. We will, for instance, consider the following questions: What kinds of questions do teachers ask? And how effective are the

"Exploring the Midlands": An Excursion to the Heart of England (Hauptseminar)

Inhalt: This six-day study trip to England will offer teacher students the opportunity... - to develop (inter-)cultural competence, - to gain first-hand experience in designing learning scenarios beyond the EFL classroom, - to acquire skills of class trip planning, organization and management. This trip will take us to various cities, places, and sights in the Midlands including, for instance, Nottingham, Birmingham, and the Peak District. Details on the programme will be given in due time. The course will be divided into three parts: 1st part: pre-trip phase - kick-off meeting on April 11, 2018 (D-1003, 8:15-9:45 a.m.) - two further preparatory meetings during the term (D-1003, 8:15-9:45 a.m.) 2nd part: while-trip - six-day trip from July 2 to July 7, 2018 3rd part: post-trip phase - wrap-up meeting on July 11, 2018 (D-1003, 8:15-9:45 a.m.)

Examenskolloquium LA Gym (I) (Kolloquium)

Das Ziel dieses Repetitoriums ist, die Studierenden für das Lehramt Gymnasium möglichst gut auf das schriftliche Staatsexamen vorzubereiten. Auf der Grundlage der vier „Körbe“ der Prüfungsthemen werden wir den Stoff der Englischdidaktik gründlich wiederholen. Dabei bearbeiten wir detailliert die Aufgabenstellungen früherer Examina. Insbesondere sollen auch prüfungsstrategische Kompetenzen aufgebaut werden.

Examenskolloquium LA Gym (II) (Kolloquium)

Dieses Examenskolloquium dient der systematischen Vorbereitung auf die schriftliche Staatsprüfung und verfolgt im Wesentlichen zwei Zielstellungen: Schwerpunkt 1: Zum einen wird der Stoff der Englischdidaktik in seiner Komplexität und Breite gründlich wiederholt, indem wir uns den vier „Prüfungskörben“ intensiv zuwenden. Hierbei besteht die Gelegenheit zur Klärung evtl. noch offener inhaltlicher Fragen. Schwerpunkt 2: Zum anderen sind die angehenden Examenskandidaten/innen gefordert, ihr fachdidaktisches Wissen zu aktivieren und in der Bearbeitung früherer Examensaufgaben zur Anwendung zu bringen. Letzteres zielt auf den Aufbau prüfungsstrategischer Kompetenzen und auf die Weiterentwicklung der Fähigkeit zum vernetzenden Denken ab. Bei der Diskussion früherer Examensaufgaben stehen beispielsweise folgende Fragen im Mittelpunkt: Wie gehe ich bei der Bearbeitung eines Prüfungsthemas konkret vor? Wie sieht eine gute Gliederung meines Prüfungstextes für eine bestimmte Aufgabe aus? Welche i

It offers systematic knowledge of genres in literary studies (poetry, drama, narrative), gives an introduction to the diverse theoretical contexts of the study of literature (literary theory), and provides basic information about the historical development of English literature. Furthermore, students will be made familiar with elementary techniques of research and essential study aids in English literary studies. Students are required to attend a supplementary course ("Begleitübung") or tutorial. There are two courses to choose from: Supp. Course (C. Schönberger): Thursday 8.15-9.45 a.m., Tutorial Course (L. Supplementary Course: American Literary Studies

This course is a supplement to the lecture course "Introduction to American Literary Studies." Participants will be provided the opportunity to acquire a variety of skills needed for effectively and successfully studying Anglophone literatures in general, and American literature in particular. In the first half of the semester, students will get to know basic academic working standards and encounter a range of important methods and techniques. In the second half, we will build on and implement the subject matter taught in the main lecture course by reading, discussing, and analyzing a number of literary texts in smaller groups and a more practice-oriented environment. Participants are required to read and prepare all of the assigned texts on time and share their responses during discussions. BA-students and students of Lehramt Gymnasium are required to attend this course in combination with the lecture "Introduction to American Literary Studies".

Supplementary Course: Introduction to English Literary Studies

This course accompanies the course "Introduction to English Literary Studies". It serves as a platform for expanding on the contents of the main introductory course. Since it is specifically designed to complement the said course, it should be attended in the same term. (Please note that it may not be combined with the course "Introduction to American Literature".) Students are required to attend this course alongside the main introductory course "Introduction to English Literary Studies".

What exactly is 'specifically human', however, is a question that has become increasingly controversial in recent decades. The assumption that the human being is the 'rational animal' has long since been put into perspective, and the idea that 'man is the measure of all things' may seem untenable in an age of advancing mechanization, globalization, and environmental degradation. The Crisis of Modernism / Modernity as Crisis (Vorlesung)

This lecture course is designed in such a way as to include (hopefully lively) discussions. Its focus lies on American culture between World War I and World War II: an era which saw the birth of new technologies of production, representation, and destruction as well as far-ranging revolutions in the organization of knowledge. Sociology, ethnology, psychoanalysis, and other disciplines, emerged in the early 20th century as specific ways of theorizing modernity. Technological innovations like film exerted a profound influence on early twentieth-century artists and writers, and contributed to how people saw their own world and the worlds of others. And yet we should not limit modernity and the culture of modernism to a fixed, non-historical moment. Going against that trend, this lecture emphasizes the processual and relational aspects of American modernity and stresses the multifacetedness and contradictoriness of the phenomenon. Starting with a brief look at late nineteenth- and early tw

Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

This course/Übung outlines some of the most relevant concepts for cultural analysis, including different notions of 'culture' itself. Drawing from a cultural studies framework and examples from current debates, we will analyze how questions of representation and power tie in with concepts and notions of 'identity', the 'nation', as well as 'race', 'class', 'gender' and 'ability' in the discursive field of culture. Examples and discussions from popular culture and cultural activism for social change complement our inquiry into the functions and effects of cultural representation.

Ü Theorizing the African Diaspora in Speculative Fiction and Popular Culture (Übung)

In this course we will examine different theories of diaspora in relation to speculative fiction and debates in popular culture. How can the concept be brought to bear on these contexts, how is it shifting, and where are its limits? For the M.A. module EAS-1854 this course is best combined with the seminar "From SciFi to the Speculative to the Supernatural."

Zugeordnete Lehrveranstaltungen: Dialectology (Seminar) This seminar consists of a theory-based dialectological part and a descriptive part. First, we will look at the importance of mechanisms and causes of language change, which lead to the formation of new dialects and eventually languages (geographical and sociological aspects are considered especially). The second part will then provide an overview of dialectal variation in the English-speaking world, covering the British Isles, North America and the southern hemisphere (Australia, New Zealand, South Africa). English Lexicology (Seminar) IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. This seminar offers a comprehensive introduction to all relevant aspects of the vocabulary of English. Informed by modern linguistic theory, we will explore the general composition and history of the English lexicon as well as the semantic and morphological structure of lexemes. Questions concerning productivity and the new formation of words as well as issues of polysemy, metaphor and the representation of words in dictionaries will be addressed and, hence, students will be invited to expand and deepen their general understanding of the English vocabulary. Language and Gender (Seminar)

This is a compact seminar (Blockseminar) which takes place on three different days. Please make sure you can attend all three continuous sessions. Within media, education and everyday life, questions of gender have gained more and more importance during the last few years. Not only, but also movements like the recent #metoo campaign or political developments towards populist gender criticism have drawn the topic into the public eye. But how can gender be approached linguistically? Do men and women really talk differently? Does it make a difference if men and women are addressed differently and – if so – what effects can be expected by gender neutral language? Which conclusions can be drawn from a queer or intercultural perspective? In this course, we will try to answer these – and other – questions, starting off with a look at general theories of gender and locating gender linguistics within the field of humanities / social sciences. We will touch upon the subject within the frame of di

Neurolinguistics (Seminar)

Neurolinguistics aims to describe the relationship between the brain and linguistic function. You will be introduced to different concepts that aim to describe this relationship. A major part of the seminar will be covered by the study of language and speech disorders like, for example, aphasias (relating to damage in specific brain areas) and dysarthrias (relating to nerve damage), as these production impairments demonstrate the connection between linguistic abilities and brain anatomy. We will also look at agnosias as disorders of language reception and perception. In order to examine the exact causes for these disorders you will also be given an overview of modern methods of brain imaging.

History of English (Vorlesung)

This lecture offers a comprehensive introduction to the history of English from its beginnings right up to the present time and considers possible relationships between linguistic changes and social changes. It discusses the peculiarities of Old English, Middle English, Early Modern English, Late Modern English and Modern English, focussing on their socio-historical backgrounds and textual traditions, and on the changing communicative needs of the speakers (and hearers) of English and Englishes throughout the centuries.

Analyzing Variation (Übung)

Variability is one of the most fundamental properties of language. In this course, we will approach linguistic variation from the perspective of Variationist Sociolinguistics, which studies the way language varies according to external (=social) and internal (=linguistic) factors. After developing a basic understanding of variation, linguistic variables and variationist methods, students will work in small groups on a mini project over the course of the semester. The project will involve compilation of a sufficiently large dataset for analysis of a particular variable, circumscription of the variable context, coding of dependent and independent variables, quantitative analysis, and visual presentation of results. The last sessions will be dedicated to the discussion of the variables examined.

Basic Phonetics A (Übung)

This class offers an introduction to the principles of Phonetics and Phonology, including the articulatory basis and feature descriptions of especially the phonemes and allophones that occur in the major varieties of English. There will be a practical focus on both British (RP) and American (GA) standard pronunciations as well on phonological transcriptions both using IPA (an account of the organizational principles of the IPA will be provided as well) and, for students of the "Lehramt", the systems expected in the Bavarian state exams.

Evidentiality (Übung)

During his presidency, Donald Trump has, on multiple occasions, discredited news networks and –papers, such as CNN, the Washington Post and the New York Times by using the term "Fake News" for reports that have been questioning and often debunking his claims. In times of these "Fake News" debates, society's awareness that truth is a relative construct has heightened immensely. But how can this awareness be expressed in language? How do we refer to our sources and how can we fact-check others? In recent years, evidentiality has emerged as a linguistic field and can help us understand how sources are marked and how our stance towards their verisimilitude is conveyed in discourse. This course aims at providing an insight into the classification and acquisition of sources as well as how they can be classified linguistically. To do this, we will look at different forms of discourse and analyze its source markers as well as look upon the different approaches in dealing with evidentiality th

Forms of Address in Context (Übung)

Forms of address are among the most fundamental linguistic means by which speakers construct and negotiate interpersonal relationships. Whether, for instance, English speakers use terms such as 'Sir', 'Mr Carmichael' or 'John' to address an interlocutor named John Carmichael provides valuable information about the speaker, the addressee, the relationship between the two as well as the situational context in which the interaction takes place. The choice of address in a particular context varies considerably across national boundaries as well as across social groups within the same country. This Übung will focus on the range of forms that speakers of English have (and used to have) at their disposal to address their interlocutors. More precisely, we are going to investigate – by means of representative case studies – in how far the speakers' address behaviour (a) has changed throughout the history of English, (b) varies across different varieties of English (e.g. AmE vs. BrE) and (c) is

Are words common only in certain contexts, are they used by certain social groups or people? How do cognitive concepts arise from linguistic forms and expressions; what does morphology and word formation reveal about the way we think? Research Methods

This is a companion course to the seminar "On Context and Common Ground" (Theories and Methods). It is meant to introduce Master students of English and American Studies to the most widely applied methods and frameworks in current linguistic research. The course will likewise familiarize students with the basic principles, techniques and tools of linguistic research, necessary to grasp, section and interpret spoken and written discourse on multiple levels.

Syntactic Structures (Übung)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. -- In this course, students are invited to recapitulate and expand their knowledge in the field of syntactic analysis. Based on the Comprehensive Grammar of the English Language (CGEL; Quirk et al.), a systematic overview of the elementary categories and concepts (formal and functional) of English syntax will be provided and students will be encouraged to practice their skills in various exercises, including the hands-on analyses of authentic English sentences.

Shakespeare's Poetry (Proseminar)

The aim of this course is to give a comprehensive introduction to William Shakespeare's poetry. We will approach his poetical works by a close reading of "Venus and Adonis", "The Rape of Lucrece", "A Lover's Complaint", "The Phoenix and the Turtle", as well as of selected sonnets. In order to be able to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their socio-historical context and key concepts of Renaissance humanism and the Elizabethan era.

The End – and After? Contemporary Post-Apocalyptic Fiction (Proseminar)

Although there have always been texts that imagine the end of the world as we know it, recent years have seen a flurry of novels that thematise the apocalypse. In this seminar we will look at three examples of novels from the English-speaking world that are concerned with the end—and particularly with what comes after, i.e. with life after a disaster that has destroyed or at least fundamentally changed human civilisation. The depiction of life after such a great all-destroying cataclysm raises a number of questions: - In what ways do these texts tackle the reasons for the catastrophe and act, in typical dystopian fashion, as warning and critique? - Which cultural features are associated with the apocalypse? - What are the consequences of surviving the cataclysm? - Why does storytelling continue after the cataclysm? - What is the status of literature after the end of civilisation? The novels we will discuss are: Cormack McCarthy, The Road (2006) Jeanette Winterson, The Stone Gods (2007) ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

The Short Story in the United States and Canada (Proseminar)

This course will disappoint those who believe that short stories are an easy read because they are, after all, what the term indicates: short. In this brevity lies the great art and potential of the genre: short stories are considerably dense and multifold, they often create an intensity of feeling that remains unparalleled even in novels. The short story's potential to move us, to set our thoughts in motion, is a central reason for the genre's popularity and success in the American and Canadian context—and if we want to know more about America's and Canada's evolution as nations, or what it means to belong to those societies, we should turn attention to the "shorts" of Washington Irving, Herman Melville, Louisa May Alcott, Zora Neal Hurston, Ernest Hemingway, Langston Hughes, Joan Didion, Annie Proulx, Margaret Atwood, Alice Munro, Mavis Gallant, Ruth Ozeki, Marvis...—not only as a source of information but, first and foremost, as an invitation to embark on a journey into the unknown, I ... Theatre of the Absurd (Proseminar)

In the 1950s, Europe saw the rise of a new form of drama that irritated traditional theatre critics and audiences and was met with utter incomprehension outside the small avant-garde and experimentalist circles in which it started to develop. Neither being part of a coherent movement nor following a 'manifesto' or underlying theory that would have explained their peculiar aesthetics to a wider audience, these plays were only linked together by the similar ways they frustrated conventional theatre expectations with their lack of closure and finality, absence of plausible characters, presentation of dysfunctional communication, use of tragicomedy as primary dramatic genre, and, above all, the absurdity of the dramatic situation. In his seminal monograph The Theatre of the Absurd (1961), Martin Esslin provided the first and still most influential attempt to subsume these aesthetically similar plays under a thematic Leitmotif when he explained them as theatrical expressions of existentia ... Drama Analysis (Übung)

This course provides students with the basic skills needed for analysing drama. We will discuss and apply the most essential concepts of drama analysis, from ancient and early modern theories of tragedy and the distinction between absolute and epic drama to methods of figure characterization, the categories of time and space, and contemporary discussions concerning the relation between text and performance. We will work with two full-length plays (to be announced soon) and excerpts from various plays from different historical periods and of different genres. Both primary and secondary literature will be made available via Digicampus. Drama Analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory) and is offered once every year.

Dystopian Fiction (Übung)

Since the beginning of the 20th century, dystopian fiction appears to be everywhere. Its function, to serve as a warning of a potentially negative future, means the contents adapt to mirror contemporary problems as they can be observed in the real world. Therefore, it serves as a means to show social and political issues in a realm of fiction to help gain a deeper understanding of contemporary culture in a way that might even inspire action. For example, in current times certain events have inspired comparisons to the fictional dystopian world Gilead from The Handmaid's Tale.

Narrative Analysis (Übung)

This course aims to introduce central principles of narrative analysis and deepen students' knowledge of these categories. Key areas are: - Narrative situation (Who speaks? Who perceives?) - Strategies of rendering consciousness in narrative - Time and space in narrative - Unreliability The basic framework will be provided by Gérard Genette's structuralist model of narratology (which we will compare against Franz K. Stanzel's triadic model of narrative situations), but where appropriate other relevant narratological theories will be introduced. Besides reading and discussing the theoretical foundations of narrative analysis, there will be a focus on applying the analytical tools provided by narratology, which means students will get ample opportunities to practise their newly gained knowledge. The analytic framework this course seeks to trace is fundamental for a profound understanding of all narrative fiction and is therefore essential both with regard to writing term papers on prose ... Narrative Analysis: Indigenous Short Fiction (Übung)Poetry Analysis (Übung)

Poetry analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory). This course is intended for all students of English and American Studies, who should have attended courses in all five of these areas before they register for their final exams. The course provides a comprehensive introduction to the key concepts of poetry analysis and its various critical approaches. For this purpose we will analyze a wide range of selected poems that comprise the major epochs of English literature. In order to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their respective historical and literary contexts.

Rethinking Humanism in Contemporary Cultural Theory (Übung)

Like philosophy or history, the study of languages, arts and cultures belongs to those branches of knowledge collectively called the 'humanities'. The term 'humanities' derives from the Renaissance tradition of learning and critical thinking known as 'humanism', but also, more broadly speaking, from 'humanism' as a focus on specifically human experiences, problems, meanings and potentials. What exactly is 'specifically human', however, is a question that has become increasingly controversial in recent decades. The assumption that the human being is the 'rational animal' has long since been put into perspective, and the idea that 'man is the measure of all things' may seem untenable in an age of advancing mechanization, globalization, and environmental degradation. Contemporary theorists disagree whether humanism is an ethically and culturally valuable attitude to the world that needs to be defended, or whether it is an outdated and dangerous point of view that should be overcome. Self-Conscious Horror in Media (Übung)

This seminar predominantly deals with horror videogames. Departing from theoretical groundwork in the creation of fear in film and videogames, we will develop a framework for talking about what instills fear in a player. After this introduction into the frightening mechanisms and conventions found in videogames, we will turn to their self-conscious elements and their function(s). These include but are not limited to artist-characters and the relation to their works of art, metaleptic structures blurring the boundaries between reality and game as well as the game's (illusion of) malfunctioning. The following games will be discussed in their entirety throughout the course: Silent Hill (PS1, 1999) Alan Wake (Xbox360/PC, 2010) Pony Island (PC, 2016) Layers of Fear (various, 2016) Doki Doki Literature Club (PC, 2017)

The Crisis of Modernism / Modernity as Crisis (Vorlesung)

This lecture course is designed in such a way as to include (hopefully lively) discussions. Its focus lies on American culture between World War I and World War II: an era which saw the birth of new technologies of production, representation, and destruction as well as far-ranging revolutions in the organization of knowledge. Sociology, ethnology, psychoanalysis, and other disciplines, emerged in the early 20th century as specific ways of theorizing modernity. Technological innovations like film exerted a profound influence on early twentieth-century artists and writers, and contributed to how people saw their own world and the worlds of others. And yet we should not limit modernity and the culture of modernism to a fixed, non-historical moment. Going against that trend, this lecture emphasizes the processual and relational aspects of American modernity and stresses the multifacetedness and contradictoriness of the phenomenon. Starting with a brief look at late nineteenth- and early tw ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

As cultural artefact, sequential art calls for a specific analysis, which depends directly on the specific medium or rather genre, such as graphic novel, comics, cartoon or manga. This course seeks to analyze all forms of sequential art based on different theoretical and methodical accesses. The focus is primarily on practical approaches and analyzing popular works including "Maus", "Amazing Spider-Man", "Walking Dead", "Watchmen" and "Sin City" as well as rather unknown ones such as "Akame ga kill" or "The Unwanted". After a short introduction of the respective method, we will practice our skills through sample analyses, in-class exercises, discussions and peer reviews of response paragraphs. For students taking the Übung "Analyzing Sequential Art": The corresponding Proseminar is "Sequential Art in Postcolonial Contexts (Johanna Pundt, Mi. 15:45 - 17:15). ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

This course/Übung outlines some of the most relevant concepts for cultural analysis, including different notions of 'culture' itself. Drawing from a cultural studies framework and examples from current debates, we will analyze how questions of representation and power tie in with concepts and notions of 'identity', the 'nation', as well as 'race', 'class', 'gender' and 'ability' in the discursive field of culture. Examples and discussions from popular culture and cultural activism for social change complement our inquiry into the functions and effects of cultural representation.

Ü Theorizing the African Diaspora in Speculative Fiction and Popular Culture (Übung)

In this course we will examine different theories of diaspora in relation to speculative fiction and debates in popular culture. How can the concept be brought to bear on these contexts, how is it shifting, and where are its limits? For the M.A. module EAS-1854 this course is best combined with the seminar "From SciFi to the Speculative to the Supernatural."

Contemporary English Drama (Vorlesung)

Die Vorlesung wird sich der wichtigsten Vertreterinnen und Vertreter des Neuen Englischen Dramas annehmen, das seit dem Skandalerfolg von John Osbornes Look Back in Anger aus dem Jahre 1956 zu einem der wichtigsten, innovativsten und lebendigsten Strömungen dramatischer Weltliteratur avanciert ist. Es werden historische Aspekte des englischen Theatersystems diskutiert wie, zum Beispiel die Konzeption eines National Theatres. Darüber hinaus wird perspektivisch das englische Drama im 20. Jahrhundert nicht nur am viktorianischen Erbe, am Modernismus, am Versdrama und am Well-Made-Play gemessen, sondern auch zu dem zentralen pan-europäischen Entwicklungslinien des Dramas (episches Theater, absurdes Theater, Metadrama) in Beziehung gesetzt, zu denen es in einer kreativen Wechselbeziehung steht. Auf der einen Seite versuchen die DramatikerInnen, die Gegebenheiten und Probleme einer sich verändernden und sich weiter modernisierenden Gesellschaft wiedererkennbar zu reflektieren und diese nicht ... Drama Analysis (Übung)

This course provides students with the basic skills needed for analysing drama. We will discuss and apply the most essential concepts of drama analysis, from ancient and early modern theories of tragedy and the distinction between absolute and epic drama to methods of figure characterization, the categories of time and space, and contemporary discussions concerning the relation between text and performance. We will work with two full-length plays (to be announced soon) and excerpts from various plays from different historical periods and of different genres. Both primary and secondary literature will be made available via Digicampus. Drama Analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory) and is offered once every year.

Discourse is conceptualised as "language patterns above the sentence" (Widdowson 2004: 3), and it is the theory and applications of these patterned which is examined across various domains of discourse. Topics to be addressed are: cohesive devices (reference, substitution, conjunction), coherences strands and grounding, thematic structure (theme and rheme), information management (given and new), and discourse markers. On Context and Common Ground (Hauptseminar) Two girls walk up to the library, both see a blue bicycle in front of it.] A: "Maybe we should grab a cup of coffee first before going in..." The notion of context is an integral part of pragmatic analyses, which more often than not deal with the negotiation of meaning between interlocutors engaged in authentic conversations. In linguistics, the seemingly unlimited potential for the disambiguation of utterances is commonly attributed to context. However, to validate this claim, we need to find answers to the following questions: What is context? In other words: What are the components that interlocutors draw on to make their contributions mutually understandable? Does everything in the interlocutors' physical surroundings automatically form part of the context? If there is a line between context and environment, where do we draw it? Then again, how is it possible that we can afford to take parts of conceptual and attitudinal knowledge in our interlocutors for granted? Th

Research Methods

This is a companion course to the seminar "On Context and Common Ground" (Theories and Methods). It is meant to introduce Master students of English and American Studies to the most widely applied methods and frameworks in current linguistic research. The course will likewise familiarize students with the basic principles, techniques and tools of linguistic research, necessary to grasp, section and interpret spoken and written discourse on multiple levels.

Syntactic Structures (Übung)

INFORMATION FOR BA STUDENTS: This course (Übung) constitutes a second part option for the "Grammar in Context"-module (EAS-2411), please choose a corresponding seminar to complete the module. -- In this course, students are invited to recapitulate and expand their knowledge in the field of syntactic analysis. Based on the Comprehensive Grammar of the English Language (CGEL; Quirk et al.), a systematic overview of the elementary categories and concepts (formal and functional) of English syntax will be provided and students will be encouraged to practice their skills in various exercises, including the hands-on analyses of authentic English sentences.

The Phonology-Morphology Interface (Übung)

In this seminar we will - as the title indicates - look at the interaction between phonology and morphology, starting with simple phonologically conditioned allomorphy like, e.g., the behavior of plural-/S/ and continuing with more complex processes like e.g., the well-known Trisyllabic Laxing Rule, which accounts for vowel changes like the one between 'divine' and 'divinity'. This will be our starting point for investigating of Lexical Phonology and Morphology as well as the accompanying phenomena of Cyclicity or the Elsewhere Condition.

James Joyce and the Modernist Novel (Hauptseminar)

James Joyce, who was born in Dublin in 1882 and who died in Zurich in 1941, is certainly the most innovative and path-breaking novelist of the twentieth century worldwide. Joyce's fiction and his experimental prose are epitomes of the modernist movement and a new, fragmented, and psychologically modernist, that is, inward and phenomenological view of life. Stream-of-consciousness techniques, which had their origin in late-19th century movements such as naturalism and literary impressionism, were brought to perfection in Joyce's works. The seminar will elaborate on major characteristics of the modernist and avantgarde movements in the 20th century. The seminar will, then, turn to Joyce's fiction in a chronological order: In this semester, we shall start with the still thoroughly naturalist prose in his collection of short stories Dubliners and then move to his famous (autobiographical) novel A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man. Studying the aesthetics of the latter will pave the way ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Metafiction (Hauptseminar)

In the most literal understanding of the word, "metafiction" denotes fiction about fiction. By making fiction or even the making of fiction(s) its main topic, metafiction not only puts emphasis on its own constructedness, it also reminds its readers continuously that they are reading a fictional work. Metafiction has also been called "self-conscious fiction", because it lays bare its use of language, (inter)textuality, literary form or genres, it relishes in storytelling, and, thus, lays bare the ontological status of a piece of fiction as an artefact. The seminar will turn to major theoretical positions and will then analyse the ways in which metafiction influences fictional form and structure, human perception and behaviour, concepts of identity and history, concepts of human and artistic creativity and imagination, as well as ontological and epistemological questions of philosophy, for instance, questions concerning objectivity, truth, and ethics. Metafiction makes us reflect the way ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Narratives of Mobility and Immobility: Diaspora, Race, and Social Exclusion (Hauptseminar)

American culture is intrinsically tied to notions of mobility: from the early pilgrims, explorers, and travelers to the flows of immigrants that have reached American shores, the US emerges as a country on the move. Here, more than elsewhere, perhaps, the idea of being "on the road," and of ever new encounters, seems vital to the country's self-perception as exceptionally dynamic, progressive, and in the making. Yet it is not only a story about criss-crossing the continent (and beyond) but also about moving upward, crossing class, racial, and gender lines, to succeed and find happiness in a land that rewards those who have courage. But this is only half the story: Ever since Melville's "Bartleby the Scrivener" are we acquainted with a group of static heroes that either refuse to move, or are pushed around, or spend their lives in the paralyzing grip of society's social, racial, and gendered contract. We may ask ourselves whether the Filipino-American author Carlos Bulosan (America is ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Stories for a Changing Planet (Hauptseminar)

According to a 2015 PEW study, Americans' trust in climate scientists was below 50% among conservative American Republicans (and at 80% among Liberal Democrats). In addition, only two out of ten Americans said the media were about right in their reporting about climate change, and the trust of elected officials to act in the public interest lay at a low of only 3%. With the election of Donald Trump, the bulk of scientific evidence that human activity causes climate change (95%) is being challenged more powerfully than ever before. It is a more general trend in environmental debates that both scientists and the media are accused of ideological bias, financial corruption, and a desire to advance their careers. Could it be that both institutionalized science and the established media have made severe mistakes in how they communicated scientific findings and the policy actions they might entail? Do we need new words, new forms of cultural expression, new educational approaches, to tell the ... (weiter siehe Digicampus)

Theories and Methods in Literary Studies

The course will introduce students to representative theories of literature and approaches to literary analysis. It combines close readings of theoretical texts (including poststructuralism, New Historicism, gender studies, ecocriticism, media studies/intermediality) with applications of these theories to important literary texts from the Anglophone canon. This course has to be taken in combination with the Übung "Applying Literary Theories and Methods".

Contemporary English Drama (Vorlesung)

Die Vorlesung wird sich der wichtigsten Vertreterinnen und Vertreter des Neuen Englischen Dramas annehmen, das seit dem Skandalerfolg von John Osbornes Look Back in Anger aus dem Jahre 1956 zu einem der wichtigsten, innovativsten und lebendigsten Strömungen dramatischer Weltliteratur avanciert ist. Es werden historische Aspekte des englischen Theatersystems diskutiert wie, zum Beispiel die Konzeption eines National Theatres. Darüber hinaus wird perspektivisch das englische Drama im 20. Jahrhundert nicht nur am viktorianischen Erbe, am Modernismus, am Versdrama und am Well-Made-Play gemessen, sondern auch zu dem zentralen pan-europäischen Entwicklungslinien des Dramas (episches Theater, absurdes Theater, Metadrama) in Beziehung gesetzt, zu denen es in einer kreativen Wechselbeziehung steht. Auf der einen Seite versuchen die DramatikerInnen, die Gegebenheiten und Probleme einer sich verändernden und sich weiter modernisierenden Gesellschaft wiedererkennbar zu reflektieren und diese nicht ... Drama Analysis (Übung)

This course provides students with the basic skills needed for analysing drama. We will discuss and apply the most essential concepts of drama analysis, from ancient and early modern theories of tragedy and the distinction between absolute and epic drama to methods of figure characterization, the categories of time and space, and contemporary discussions concerning the relation between text and performance. We will work with two full-length plays (to be announced soon) and excerpts from various plays from different historical periods and of different genres. Both primary and secondary literature will be made available via Digicampus. Drama Analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory) and is offered once every year.

Dystopian Fiction (Übung)

Since the beginning of the 20th century, dystopian fiction appears to be everywhere. Its function, to serve as a warning of a potentially negative future, means the contents adapt to mirror contemporary problems as they can be observed in the real world. Therefore, it serves as a means to show social and political issues in a realm of fiction to help gain a deeper understanding of contemporary culture in a way that might even inspire action. For example, in current times certain events have inspired comparisons to the fictional dystopian world Gilead from The Handmaid's Tale.

Narrative Analysis (Übung)

This course aims to introduce central principles of narrative analysis and deepen students' knowledge of these categories. Key areas are: - Narrative situation (Who speaks? Who perceives?) - Strategies of rendering consciousness in narrative - Time and space in narrative - Unreliability The basic framework will be provided by Gérard Genette's structuralist model of narratology (which we will compare against Franz K. Stanzel's triadic model of narrative situations), but where appropriate other relevant narratological theories will be introduced. Besides reading and discussing the theoretical foundations of narrative analysis, there will be a focus on applying the analytical tools provided by narratology, which means students will get ample opportunities to practise their newly gained knowledge. The analytic framework this course seeks to trace is fundamental for a profound understanding of all narrative fiction and is therefore essential both with regard to writing term papers on prose ... Poetry Analysis (Übung)

Poetry analysis is one of the five major areas relevant to literary studies (prose, drama, poetry, film, and literary theory). This course is intended for all students of English and American Studies, who should have attended courses in all five of these areas before they register for their final exams. The course provides a comprehensive introduction to the key concepts of poetry analysis and its various critical approaches. For this purpose we will analyze a wide range of selected poems that comprise the major epochs of English literature. In order to fully understand these texts, we shall also explore their respective historical and literary contexts.

Rethinking Humanism in Contemporary Cultural Theory (Übung)

Like philosophy or history, the study of languages, arts and cultures belongs to those branches of knowledge collectively called the 'humanities'. The term 'humanities' derives from the Renaissance tradition of learning and critical thinking known as 'humanism', but also, more broadly speaking, from 'humanism' as a focus on specifically human experiences, problems, meanings and potentials. What exactly is 'specifically human', however, is a question that has become increasingly controversial in recent decades. The assumption that the human being is the 'rational animal' has long since been put into perspective, and the idea that 'man is the measure of all things' may seem untenable in an age of advancing mechanization, globalization, and environmental degradation. Contemporary theorists disagree whether humanism is an ethically and culturally valuable attitude to the world that needs to be defended, or whether it is an outdated and dangerous point of view that should be overcome. Part II for participants of the travel course from the winter term 17/18 in which we will discuss the projects developed during the cross-cultural seminar.

Self-Conscious Horror in Media (Übung)

This seminar predominantly deals with horror videogames. Departing from theoretical groundwork in the creation of fear in film and videogames, we will develop a framework for talking about what instills fear in a player. After this introduction into the frightening mechanisms and conventions found in videogames, we will turn to their self-conscious elements and their function(s). These include but are not limited to artist-characters and the relation to their works of art, metaleptic structures blurring the boundaries between reality and game as well as the game's (illusion of) malfunctioning. The following games will be discussed in their entirety throughout the course: Silent Hill (PS1, 1999) Alan Wake (Xbox360/PC, 2010) Pony Island (PC, 2016) Layers of Fear (various, 2016) Doki Doki Literature Club (PC, 2017)

Study Trip to Ireland 2018 (Übung)

The Crisis of Modernism / Modernity as Crisis (Vorlesung)

This lecture course is designed in such a way as to include (hopefully lively) discussions. Its focus lies on American culture between World War I and World War II: an era which saw the birth of new technologies of production, representation, and destruction as well as far-ranging revolutions in the organization of knowledge. Sociology, ethnology, psychoanalysis, and other disciplines, emerged in the early 20th century as specific ways of theorizing modernity. Technological innovations like film exerted a profound influence on early twentieth-century artists and writers, and contributed to how people saw their own world and the worlds of others. And yet we should not limit modernity and the culture of modernism to a fixed, non-historical moment. Going against that trend, this lecture emphasizes the processual and relational aspects of American modernity and stresses the multifacetedness and contradictoriness of the phenomenon. Starting with a brief look at late nineteenth- and early tw

Ü Analyzing Sequential Art (Übung)

As cultural artefact, sequential art calls for a specific analysis, which depends directly on the specific medium or rather genre, such as graphic novel, comics, cartoon or manga. This course seeks to analyze all forms of sequential art based on different theoretical and methodical accesses. The focus is primarily on practical approaches and analyzing popular works including "Maus", "Amazing Spider-Man", "Walking Dead", "Watchmen" and "Sin City" as well as rather unknown ones such as "Akame ga kill" or "The Unwanted". After a short introduction of the respective method, we will practice our skills through sample analyses, in-class exercises, discussions and peer reviews of response paragraphs. For students taking the Übung "Analyzing Sequential Art": The corresponding Proseminar is "Sequential Art in Postcolonial Contexts (Johanna Pundt, Mi. 15:45 - 17:15).

Ü Cultural Analysis (Übung)

This course/Übung outlines some of the most relevant concepts for cultural analysis, including different notions of 'culture' itself. Drawing from a cultural studies framework and examples from current debates, we will analyze how questions of representation and power tie in with concepts and notions of 'identity', the 'nation', as well as 'race', 'class', 'gender' and 'ability' in the discursive field of culture. Examples and discussions from popular culture and cultural activism for social change complement our inquiry into the functions and effects of cultural representation.

Ü Theorizing the African Diaspora in Speculative Fiction and Popular Culture (Übung)

In this course we will examine different theories of diaspora in relation to speculative fiction and debates in popular culture. How can the concept be brought to bear on these contexts, how is it shifting, and where are its limits? For the M.A. module EAS-1854 this course is best combined with the seminar "From SciFi to the Speculative to the Supernatural."
